Resolution Follows Post Revelations Of Hidden Reports; $25,000 Fund Asked

By Robert Bruckin
Post Reporter

A resolution authorizing full investigation of Washington police was approved yesterday by the Senate District Committee.

As a result of The Post's exposure of hidden crime complaints, the committee voted out a resolution to "conduct a full and complete study and investigation with respect to law enforcement and police administration."

The resolution asked the Senate to approve expenses of $25,000 to employ investigators and other assistants.

The resolution voted out yesterday now awaits action by the Senate.

Vote Is Unanimous
The committee vote was unanimous. In fact, it was "like spontaneous combustion," said James R. Kirkland, committee counsel, after the executive meeting.

The resolution was sponsored by Senators J. Howard McGrath (D., N. J.), chairman of the Public Service Subcommittee, Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) and John Sherman Cooper (R., Ky.).

The resolution includes in its investigation the Park and Capital Police as well as all other police organizations in the District. Members left no doubt, however, that it was aimed at the Metropolitan Police Department.

Directs Complete Study
Senator McGrath dropped the resolution into the Senate hopper late yesterday. It states:

"That the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is hereby authorized and directed:

"1. To conduct a full and complete study and investigation with respect to law enforcement and police administration in the District of Columbia.

"2. To report to the Senate at the earliest practicable date the results of such study and investigation, together with such recommendations as it may deem desirable.

"For the purpose of this resolution, the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to employ upon a temporary basis such technical, clerical and other assistants as it deems advisable, and is authorized, with the consent of the head of the department or agency concerned, to utilize the services, information, facilities and personnel of any of the departments or agencies of the Government of the United States.

"The expenses of the committee under this resolution, which shall not exceed $25,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee."

Could Use FBI
Upon approval of the full Senate, the District Committee would be permitted to arrange for FBI personnel to conduct the investigation if it desired.

The action came after articles in The Post disclosed that the Detective Bureau was "pocketing" complaints made by residents and visitors of crimes committed against them.

More than 600 robbery complaints were found that had not been reported in police statistics. The police reported 761 robbery complaints made in the first 11 months of the 1946-47 fiscal year. The Post found more than 1350.

Citizens Demand Action
A few hours before the District Committee acted, the executive board of the Federation of Citizens Associations demanded a congressional and grand jury investigation of the Metropolitan Police.

The resolution was adopted by the federation's committee on police and fire protection at a special meeting called by its chairman, P. J. Ableman Tuesday night. It See POLICE, Page 15, Column 1.

School Figure Unchanged $96,000,000 D. C. Funds Bill Passes House, Goes to Senate

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The House yesterday approved and sent to the Senate Washington's $96-million-dollar money bill for this fiscal year.

A voice vote cleared the bill after Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.) and other members of the House District Appropriations Subcommittee beat down an attempt to cut school-building funds.

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) asked the House to cut about $279,000 in cash for school building out of the bill. The move was shouted down, leaving the school appropriation at the record mark of $24,484,250. Of that, $4,719,830 is for plans, equipment and building of schools.

Horan lost from the bill only his bid to ream the District set-up for control over spending. Language that would have clipped the powers of Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler and increased those of District Auditor A. B. Pilkerton was knocked out of the bill.

Representative Karl Stefan (R., Neb.), ranking member of Horan's group, forced the shake-up language out of the bill by a point of order.

Kept in the bill, however, was a section calling for a pre-audit of all city spending by Pilkerton's office.

Horan said other minor language changes approved by the House did not affect the money total.

Representative Lansdale G. Sasser (D., Md.) asked the House to strike out a section to make new nonresident pupils pay tuition in the District schools. He lost by a voice vote. Non resident pupils now getting free tuition in the District schools would not be affected, but new outside students would have to pay.

The Senate is slated to send the money bill to hearings before the Senate District Appropriations Subcommittee. Its chairman, Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) said the hearings will not start before Monday.

Court Clerk Murdered, Says Coroner

Search for Missing Auto, Mystery Man Turns to District

An official verdict of murder was issued yesterday in Fairfax County, Va., in the death of Norman L. Plank, 29-year-old court clerk.

Dr. Nelson Podolnick, Fairfax coroner, said he issued the homicide certificate after FBI tests failed to disclose fingerprints on what police believe is the "death gun."

Fairfax Police Chief Carl McIntosh said further tests had failed to find any trace of powder on the man's hands and no powder burns on his head. Presence of either might have upheld the suicide theory. Plank's death was at first considered suicide and a verdict to that effect was issued.

Search Turns to D. C.
Meanwhile, the search for the missing Buick automobile, stolen from the home where Plank's body was found at 12:40 a. m. Monday, turned to Washington and the Georgetown area. The car was owned by Mrs. Nellie L. Burrer, 4108 Forest St., Chesham, Va., where Plank made his home.

There is a Nation-wide lookout for the car and for a "mystery man" who was brought to the Burrer home by Plank on Saturday while Mrs. Burrer and her son, Donald, 21, were out of the city for the fourth weekend.

Plank, a former soldier and clerk in the District Small Claims Court, was found by Donald Burrer when he returned home early Monday morning. There was a 22-caliber bullet hole in his head and a 22-pistol was found five steps away on the basement stairs.

Towel Used by Slayer
Also found on the stair was a towel with which police believe the slayer wiped off fingerprints from the pistol.

Fairfax Detective Chief Lieut. H. T. McGarity and Sgt. James Mahoney conferred with Metropolitan Police on a city-wide search for the stolen Buick. A broken glass, bearing at least one good fingerprint, was submitted to the FBI for further examination.

5-Year-Old Douses Baby
A young mother gathered her two children together in the kitchen of her Prince Georges County home yesterday, turned on the gas and lit a cigarette.

The blast that followed fatally injured her, seriously burned the children and seriously wrecked the home.

The mother, Mrs. Charlotte Backus, 31, of 6716 Conway ave., Hampshire Knolls, Md., who died at the Washington Sanitarium at 2 p. m., four hours after the explosion, told police ill health had prompted her suicide attempt.

The children are Charles, 5, who suffered first- and second-degree burns about the face, neck, upper back and arms, and Andrew, 3, who received first- and second-degree burns on the face, arms and lower legs.

Senate Sends Unification Bill to House

Amendments Beaten As Armed Service Streamline Measure Is Given Approval

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Senate late yesterday passed the long-pending Army-Navy unification bill, designed to streamline America's security forces.

Approval came by voice vote, after one major stand by opponents was defeated decisively.

The measure now goes to the House, where a similar bill is being readied for floor action.

The only fight came, on an amendment by Senator Joe McCarthy (R., Wis.) to bar the proposed Secretary of National Security from transferring any of the functions of naval aviation or the Marine Corps to the Army or Air Forces.

It was defeated, 52 to 19, on a roll call tally.

Bill Is Compromise
Previously, the Senate shouted down three amendments presented by Senator Edward V. Robertson (R., Wyo.) aimed at restricting the powers of the Secretary of National Security. Lacking the votes, he failed to call up several others he had pending.

The only amendment adopted on the floor was presented by Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio) and accepted by the committee. It would bar the proposed National Security Council from exercising advisory powers over foreign and domestic policies except as they specifically pertained to national security.

Under the bill, the Security Council would consist of the President, Secretaries of State, National Security, Army, Navy and Air Forces and chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

Taft said he was afraid the military-dominated group might exercise too great an effect on foreign policy.

With the measure on the "must" list of House leaders, the end of the long Army-Navy merger fight seems in sight.

The present bill is a compromise plan, agreed to by top Army, Navy and Air Force officials, but still opposed by a number of ranking Navy and Marine Corps officers.

It would:

- 1. Create a new Government department—the Department of Air Force—and set up the present Army Air Forces under it as a coequal branch of the armed services.
- 2. Take away the Cabinet status of the Secretary of the Navy and See UNITY, Page 4, Column 5.

Daylight Saving Is Recommended For D. C. Annually

Daylight saving time for the District every summer was recommended yesterday by the Senate District Committee.

The committee approved and forwarded to the Senate the bill of Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) to make daylight saving time an annual event in Washington.

McGrath led the fight to get daylight saving time for Washington this summer. The present law, however, is good for this year only.

The Senate District group endorsed the plan by a unanimous voice vote.

Noblesse Oblige
Crowd Keeps Still as Amputee Bids in Pet Horse, Then Cheers

By John London
Post Reporter

Abruptly the strident voices of the crowd subsided to a hush. Some 300 persons leaned forward, anxious not to miss a word or scene of the unexpected, one-act drama.

The auctioneer presiding over hammer and microphone at the riding hall at Fort Myer, scene of the War Assets Administration sale of 61 surplus Army horses, had made an unusual plea.

He urged the crowd not to bid for horse No. 5.

"This horse has been trained by an Army man, a combat veteran," said the auctioneer. "This horse has learned to respond to the soldier's left knee lead. The soldier is an amputee."

The "soldier," Maj. Philip Larimore, 22, bid $50. The crowd refused to bid against him.

Larimore climbed into the riding walk, walked briskly to his 10-year-old bay gelding pal, Chugwater, smiled appreciation to the crowd, then led the horse away.

The crowd loosed a thunderous ovation, then quickly resumed sharply competitive bidding.

While Larimore would say little to reporters, his Army record reveals:

- He had been wounded six times at Anzio and southern France when a German bullet crushed the bone in his right leg. Nevertheless, he wiped out three machine-gun nests. His right leg was amputated.
- For that action he received the DSC, last May 29, when all troops

Larger the Number Of Participating Nations the Better, Armour Declares

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
By the United Press

The United States kept the door open to Soviet Russia yesterday to reconsider and come into the Marshall program for the reconstruction of Europe.

Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour suggested, in fact, that Russia's presence would still be welcome at next Saturday's conference in Paris.

The wider the participation the more effective the Paris conference will be, Armour told a news conference.

He also said it would be unfortunate if certain countries that wanted to participate were prevented by pressure. He declined, however, to comment on a question asking whether "pressure" had been applied. He said the United States was not taking any action to persuade any nation to join the Paris discussions.

The Assistant Secretary's reference to Russia was regarded here as part of a conscious American effort to hold the door open in spite of Foreign Minister Molotov's harsh rejection of the Marshall program last week.

American policy-makers are anxious to do nothing which would give Russia the slightest pretext for saying that the West was shutting her out of European reconstruction.

Any banging of doors will have to be done by Russia itself, as Molotov did last week, or under Soviet pressure, as the Polish government did in rejecting participation last night.

There is no question here that Poland knuckled under to the strongest Soviet pressure of the past two years. Until now the Poles have consistently taken part in international conferences and international organizations in which Russia was not represented.

Their rejection was contrasted here with the acceptance of the Czechs, who made up their own minds before they bothered to consult Moscow about it.

The Poles had given every sign of wanting to go to Paris.

Body of Baby Found in Locker
Baltimore, July 9 (AP)—The body of a baby about a month old was found in a baggage locker today at Greyhound bus terminal.

A baggage master found the body wrapped in a towel and tucked inside a shopping bag as he was making a routine check of the lockers. Doctors said the baby may have been dead as long as two weeks.

Traitor Gets Life Term
Manila, July 9 (AP)—Ernest Berge, wealthy German-born Manila businessman and naturalized citizen of the Philippines, today was sentenced to life imprisonment for treason. The court held that in selling war essentials to the Japanese and displaying the swastika flag he had "openly betrayed his legally adopted land." He was also fined $7500.

Marshall Sees Senators
Movement Starts in Congress To Revise, Strengthen U. N.

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A strong bipartisan movement to revise and strengthen the United Nations Charter as an instrument of peace developed yesterday on Capitol Hill.

Sponsors individually voiced sentiment for building the United Nations into a strong war-preventive agency, with Russia's aid if possible, but without it if she fails to go along.

Ten Senators introduced a concurrent resolution calling for strengthening amendments "to prevent war and maintain world peace" after five of their number conferred with Secretary of State George C. Marshall.

Later, Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) introduced a more specific resolution urging President Truman "take the initiative in calling a general conference of the United Nations . . . for the purpose of making the United Nations capable of enforcing world law to prevent war."

The movement spread to the House where another bipartisan group of 10, led by Representatives Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) and Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) introduced resolutions worded almost identically with Taylor's.

Said a statement by the House group:

"The sponsors believe that there is no surer way of determining whether the Soviet Union is bent upon conquest than by learning whether she would be willing to go along with other nations in creating a United Nations which could guarantee her security."

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), leading Senate sponsor of the similar resolution, told reporters:

Lieut. Philip Mountbatten Princess Elizabeth Betrothed To Former Prince of Greece

PHILIP MOUNTBATTEN PRINCESS ELIZABETH

London (Thursday), July 10 (AP)—The engagement of Princess Elizabeth to her childhood sweetheart, the handsome former Prince Philip of Greece, was announced officially today by King George VI.

No date has been announced for the wedding, but it probably will be in October at Westminster Abbey. The 21-year-old Elizabeth will be the first princess to marry without a dowry.

The 26-year-old Philip—big, blond and breezy—gave his bride-to-be an engagement ring containing a large diamond and two smaller baguette diamonds set in platinum.

The King drafted his announcement while festive crowds thronged in front of Buckingham Palace awaiting confirmation of betrothal reports.

Court Circular Issued
A court circular said:

"It is with the greatest pleasure that the King and Queen announce the betrothal of their dearly beloved daughter, the Princess Elizabeth, to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, R. N., son of the late Prince Andrew of Greece and Princess Alice (Princess Alice of Battenberg), to which union the King has gladly given his consent."

The former prince, who gave up his royal titles last March to become a British citizen, spent the afternoon with his betrothed, and dined with the royal family last night.

Mountbatten is certain to be named a duke. He probably will become the Duke of Clarence.

This title has been vacant for half a century. He is a great-grandson of Queen Victoria and her consort, Prince Albert, and a distant cousin of Princess Elizabeth, who is a great-granddaughter of Victoria.

Elizabeth is the first British Princess of American descent. One of her mother's ancestors was Robert Porteous, an early settler in Virginia. Porteous' wife was a cousin of George Washington's father.

Albania Expected To Veto Plan Also; Finland, Hungary Positions Uncertain

Paris, July 9 (AP)—Poland and Yugoslavia joined Russia and two other nations in the Soviet orbit tonight in rejecting the British-French invitation to participate in the Paris Conference on European recovery under the Marshall plan which opens here Saturday.

On the eve of the deadline for accepting the bids, sent to 22 European nations, Finland and Hungary remained the only two nations whose participation was uncertain.

The participation of 15 nations, in addition to France and Great Britain, definitely was assured. It was anticipated that Albania, who also has not replied to the invitation, would follow Russia's lead in refusing to discuss the American aid proposal advanced last month by Secretary of State George C. Marshall.

German Aid Opposed
Poland's refusal, announced in Warsaw after a four-hour cabinet meeting, was prompted chiefly by the fact that Germany would share equally in reconstruction efforts with other war-torn countries. Bulgaria's rejection of the bid was announced earlier in the day and Romania notified the British and French of their refusal earlier this week.

Observers said there was a "50-50" chance that Finland and Hungary would send representatives to the conference.

Those countries which have officially or unofficially accepted are: Belgium, Italy, Portugal, Eire, Greece, Turkey, Luxembourg, Holland, Czechoslovakia, Ireland, Austria, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

It was said that acceptance by Finland and Hungary might be hedged with political reservations.

Czechs Ask for Details
Georges Bidault, French Foreign Minister, informed a national assembly committee that Czechoslovakia had inquired for details on the "American conditions" of aid to Europe. He insisted that the United States had posed no conditions for aiding a European mutual assistance program.

The Foreign Ministers of Norway, Sweden and Denmark met in Copenhagen. A joint communique announced they had agreed on the Scandinavian attitude at the Paris conference, establishing accord on such problems as the tasks of committees and their relation to existing international organizations.

Czechoslovakia's Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk meanwhile, arrived in Moscow for consultations with Russian officials. He was accompanied by Communist Premier Klement Gottwald.

Bulgaria Explains Refusal
Prague, Czechoslovakia, July 9 (AP)—Bulgaria will not attend the Paris conference because the proposed Marshall plan organization might disrupt its own reconstruction plan and because it cannot conference "the division of Europe into two hostile camps," a communique of the Bulgarian telegraph agency said today.

Arrests in Athens Held Greek Affair

By 2 Countries Compromises Proposed on Balkan Issue

Lake Success, July 9 (P).—France and Colombia have approached the United States with compromises aimed at reconciling the opposing American and Russian proposals for settlement of Balkan disorders, it was learned authoritatively today.

The American delegation to the United Nations has rejected both proposals designed to water down the United States resolution calling for a semipermanent investigating commission to halt Greek border disturbances.

Russia already has rejected the commission idea, put all the blame on Greece, and insisted that the Athens government itself take steps to correct the situation.

The United States was represented as confident that it could muster the necessary seven Security Council votes to pass the resolution, leaving Russia with the veto as the only weapon to block action.

Details of the French and Colombian proposals were lacking but they were understood to call for a commission without power to act except with the express consent of Greece and three Soviet satellites—Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria.

The council will renew its discussions on the Greek situation tomorrow afternoon.

Meanwhile, Frederick H. Osborn, American delegate, warned the political committee of the U. N. Atomic Commission against any wording in an atomic treaty which would allow nations to pile up enough nuclear fuel to be of military significance.

Commenting on proposals for research and development, Osborn insisted that an international body should take over research or development operations from an individual nation when the amount of nuclear fuel produced is "dangerous." He defined "dangerous" as meaning when such amounts might be of military significance.

Truman Summons Parley Monday On Marshall Plan

By the United Press

Informed sources said yesterday that President Truman has summoned the six Republican and Democratic congressional leaders to a White House conference Monday at which he is expected to propose legislation to carry out the Marshall plan for European recovery.

These informants said the President told the Big Six nothing about the nature of the parley. But they indicated it probably would deal with authorizing legislation for the Marshall plan and possibly with the question of convening a special foreign policy session of Congress later this year, if necessitated by developments abroad.

Invited to the meeting were acting Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Senate Republican Leader Wallace H. White, Jr. (Me.), Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley (Ky.), House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R., Mass.), House Republican Leader Charles A. McNinch (Ind.), and House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn (Tex.).

Iranian Premier Closes 6 Papers On 'Panic' Charge

Tehran, Iran, July 9 (P).—Premier Ahmed Qavam's government, following up its proclamation of martial law, suppressed six Tehran newspapers today on charges of "creating panic."

Qavam announced the resignation of Gen. Farajollah Aghavelli as Minister of the Interior. Gen. Ahmed Sepehrodi Amir Ahmedi resigned yesterday as War Minister.

Three of the editors of the suppressed newspapers were arrested, and police were searching for the other three executives. The majority of Tehran's newspapers have criticized Qavam since war-time martial law was lifted last month.

He cited dispatches in local papers which termed cabinet members "thieves" and himself "chief of thieves." Iran has no libel laws.

State Dept. Sees Roundup of Reds No Concern of U. S.

Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour yesterday enunciated what sounded like a hands-off policy toward the Greek government's police measures.

Armour said the reported arrest of 2000 alleged Communists in Athens was a matter of internal administration for the Greek government to decide.

He told a news conference that the United States had not been told officially of the arrests, nor had it received any official information about an alleged leftist "plot" in Athens.

Naturally, he said, the United States is interested in seeing peaceful conditions restored in Greece, and counts on the Greek government doing its utmost to bring about such conditions. But what actual steps are taken, he said, are for the Greek government itself to decide.

Tsaldaris Knew of 'Plot'

Foreign Minister Constantine Tsaldaris of Greece, who saw Secretary Marshall and other State Department officials a few hours later, told reporters he knew of a leftist "plot" before he left Athens last week. He said it was intended as a diversion to distract attention from the United Nations Security Council debate on the warfare along the northern Greek border.

The arrests in Athens yesterday recalled Secretary Marshall's appeal last February for an amnesty in Greece and for the removal of extremists from both sides, Left and Right. Tsaldaris said yesterday, however, that there was no question of an amnesty, since the Greek government had offered it three times and the guerrillas had refused to agree to lay down their arms as a prerequisite.

Tsaldaris's visit to the State Department was his first opportunity to meet Secretary Marshall, Undersecretary Lovett and former Gov. Dwight P. Griswold, chief of the United States mission in Greece.

Their discussions concerned the development of the Greek aid program exclusively, according to informed sources. Tsaldaris did not ask for any further help but stressed the need of haste in getting the mission to work and putting Greece back on its feet.

No Talk of Military Aid

He told reporters there was no need for him to talk of military aid to Greece now since the border question was now under discussion in the Security Council.

"We have put our case in the hands of the United Nations," he said, "and we have to wait for the decision."

As to emergency relief, which is distinct from the 400-million-dollar Greek-Turkish aid program, Tsaldaris said he had been told the United States would allocate between 50 and 60 million dollars to Greece out of the 350 million appropriated by Congress for six countries in Europe and Asia.

Former Governor Griswold, who was present at the talks with Tsaldaris, expects to leave on Sunday in President Truman's new DC-6 plane, the Independence. On the plane with him will be the body of Climon Diamantopoulos, the Greek Ambassador who died at his post in this country last winter.

Before Griswold leaves he is expected to announce the names of his chief assistants and advisers on the Greek mission.

"I want to make it clear that we go to Greece to help Greece," he said in a radio interview last night. "We want to see this long-time friend and brave ally restored to her rightful place in the peaceful family of nations."

"We feel that Greece should have the chance to put her house in order, free from the menace of hostile forces across her frontiers. We can, unfortunately, help in only a small way, the need is so great. But perhaps we can help the Greek people to a point where they can independently and effectively help themselves. Only in that way will our aid be permanent; only with that approach will it be truly effective."

conclusion that peace must be maintained, and that if it cannot be maintained with Russia it naturally will have to be done without Russia."

Individual sponsors placed various more detailed interpretations on the several resolutions. Implicit in all were calls for revision of the Big Five Security Council veto, prompt implementation of United Nations police powers, atomic energy agreement and world security assurance to lay a solid base for Europe's economic reconstruction and the Marshall plan.

Joining Ferguson in his initial resolution were Senators Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.), Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), Brian McMahon (D., Conn.), John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) and Taylor.

Six of these, Ferguson, Flanders, Baldwin, McMahon, Sparkman and O'Mahoney, earlier called on Marshall to "tell him" what they proposed to do. They are understood to have sought and received no commitments from Marshall. Some believed, however, that Marshall was not adverse to the resolution Ferguson introduced.

The latter resolution, revised following the talk with Marshall, omitted any specific appeal to the President to initiate the calling of a General Conference of the United Nations under Article 109 of the Charter.

The revised resolution said: "That it is the sense of the Congress of the United States that permanent world peace can and will be achieved through the United Nations and to that purpose we believe that action should be taken under the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations to propose and adopt amendments and revisions that will strengthen the United Nations as an instrument to prevent war and maintain world peace."

No 'Official' Backing

Senate sponsors said Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) was not consulted in advance. It was noted also that none of the sponsors was a member of the Foreign Relations group. The proponents said they deliberately took this course to avoid any "official" link with the move.

Questioned Later on the Ferguson Resolution, Vandenberg Told newsmen:

"I do not see how anyone can object to these announced purposes. The question, however, is how to do it and when to do it. I have always felt myself, for example, that use of the veto should be confined to article 42 of the Charter."

Article 42 concerns use of force. Taylor joined in offering the Ferguson resolution, but later said he and some others felt it was "not specific enough." He introduced a more detailed resolution, joined by these other Senators: Dennis Chavez (N. Mex.), Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), James E. Murray (D., Mont.) and Claude Pepper (D., Fla.).

Taylor's Resolution

The Taylor resolution read: "Whereas all the people in the world deeply desire durable peace; and

"Whereas the United Nations was created as an instrument to preserve the peace of the world; and

"Whereas it now is apparent that the United Nations requires strengthening for the full performance of this noble and crucial task; and

"Whereas the United Nations

Grain Export Is at Its Peak, Anderson Says

Paris, July 9 (U.P.).—Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson today warned the opening session of the International Cereals Conference that hungry nations must not count on increased grain shipments from the United States.

Anderson called on European nations to step up their wheat collections and continue bread rationing for another year. Unless they do so, he warned, "next spring may bring, for the third successive year, intense crisis and suffering."

Anderson later told a press conference that American wheat shipments were not based on political considerations.

"I do not take my orders from the State Department," he said. "The American flag areas in Germany and Japan are our primary considerations. The rest of our wheat shipments do not have political implications."

"My instructions came from President Truman, who told me he wanted me to do the best possible job on getting food to hungry people wherever they may be."

The Secretary told the 33-nation International Emergency Food Council Conference that there was "no chance" of bridging the wide gap between cereal requirements and supplies. "There is not enough grain for export," he explained.

Anderson said the purpose of the meeting was to "see what may be done to make the best of a bad situation." He said he feared European and Asiatic diets would have to remain at emergency levels in 1947 and 1948.

Ramadier Asks Solidarity

Dr. Dennis A. Fitzgerald, general secretary of the conference, said that world import needs for cereal grain would fall 18-million tons short of prospective exports for 1947-48.

This conference had two purposes, he said—to understand that grain supplies would fall short of grain needs and to consider methods of lessening privations resulting from the shortage.

French Premier Paul Ramadier, addressing the plenary session, called for close "food solidarity among nations" as one of the "most stable bases of world political solidarity."

Paris, July 9 (U.P.).—John Strachey, British food minister, told European nations today that they must not permit "ideological considerations" to be an obstacle to Europe's economic recovery with American aid.

Strachey spoke to a world emergency cereals conference. Russia was not present.

Three days in advance of the conference on the Marshall aid-to-Europe plan, Strachey declared:

"We as Europeans have no right to come to the United States for further aid unless we are ready to sweep out of our way every single other consideration, no matter what it is, that stands in the way of rapid industrial recovery."

"There are other considerations—ideological considerations perhaps even more, considerations of bitterness that may have some justification even two years after the war."

"But I say to other European countries even those considerations, no matter how strongly held, must not be allowed to impede the rapidity of redevelopment of our production."

Situation Is Tense in Greece As Communists Are Arrested

They insist that the spectacular fire was set in four places and was sabotage.

Investigation of the fire is not completed, but British authorities indicate that the blaze started in the British film section of the building and spread to gasoline stored nearby.

Reds Cry 'Reichstag'

The Tameion Building is headquarters for the British forces, as well as the American military mission.

EAM leaders were loud in their protest to claims that the fire was Communist sabotage and say that the government, and particularly Zervas, Public Safety Minister General, is attempting to create a situation paralleling the Reichstag fire in Berlin to purge all opponents of the government.

It has been obvious for days that the government was getting ready for a purge of the Communist leaders. Resolutions adopted by the Strasbourg meeting of French Communists calling for a "free government" to be set up in the mountains, and the steady disappearance of Communist workers from Athens, has had the police and the office of public safety on the alert.

The government raids put to an end negotiations which had just been started by the EAM looking to a compromise agreement with the government to end hostilities in the north. The approach was made through Themistocles Sophoulis veteran head of the Labor Party. Sophoulis emphasized to me that he was not actually acting as mediator between the government and the EAM, but simply trying to bring about an accord that would stop civil war.

Coalition Asked

"Civil war can be stopped only by political means and not by military means," he said. "And that is something about which the Americans can do nothing. We have got to settle this matter ourselves. Only a coalition government that is trusted by all Greeks can bring peace."

The arrest of all the Communist leaders and party workers leaves the rightist regime more strongly in the saddle. But there is a tenseness and unrest in Athens today that is very disquieting.

Observers are wondering if American aid will come in time, for the political situation in Greece is worsening by the hour.

U. S. 'Dollar Invasion' Of Germany Is Denied

Berlin, July 9 (U.P.).—Apparently replying to allegations made in the Russian-controlled section of the Berlin press that American businessmen are making a "dollar invasion" of western Germany, the American Military Government asserted today that no new investment of American or other foreign capital had been made or authorized in U. S.-occupied territory since the war.

American and foreign businessmen are not in the U. S. zone of Germany as "investors of new capital but as prospective purchasers of German exports," a formal A.M.G. statement said.

Six German War Plants Destroyed in U. S. Zone

Berlin, July 9 (U.P.).—Military government officials today announced the liquidation of six of the 128 munitions and aircraft plants in the American zone which are to be destroyed under terms of the Moscow agreement.

The U. S. thus became the first occupying power to announce such demolitions which must be completed by June, 1948. Informed sources said that Russia, though silent on the number, had demolished more plants than the other three powers.

Oil Combines Sign Middle East Pact

No Threat Seen
Oil Situation
Not Critical, House Hears

By The Associated Press
Eugene Holman, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, said yesterday he does not consider the current oil supply situation "critical" or that it will become so.

Holman told the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee that the industry is now operating at the "highest rate" in all its history and is engaged in a major expansion program which should "soon relieve the present pressure."

"I do not believe the situation is or will become critical in the sense of affecting our national welfare. I am confident the industry will, as it always has in the past, meet the public's needs," he said.

Holman testified in connection with the committee's investigation of oil prospects. He said, "spot or temporary shortages" may occur to cause "some inconveniences, particularly in the Midwest, but there will be no hardship."

Russian Shipment Approved
Holman said only "unexpected road blocks" such as an exceptionally cold winter, a serious breakdown in industrial output or "serious and unpredictable" developments in the national scene can prevent the industry from meeting the Nation's need in the period immediately ahead.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department yesterday granted a special export license for shipment of petroleum products to Russia only a few hours after Chairman Welch (R., Ohio) of the House Merchant-Marine Committee demanded the license be refused.

Undersecretary of Commerce William C. Foster acknowledged his office issued the license after Welch had telephoned him Tuesday to halt the movement of 248,000 barrels of petroleum now being loaded aboard three American-owned tankers on the West Coast.

Foster's announcement was made calmly before the Merchant Marine Committee in response to a question by Representative Willis Bradley (R., Calif.).

Obviously taken by surprise and apparently angry, Welch demanded to know whether Foster had received the message "on behalf of the committee."

Message Being "Considered"
Foster: "That's right, sir."
Welch: "What did you do about it?"

Foster said it had been taken "under consideration."

Earlier, he had declared, in response to questions, that the department planned to continue to issue export licenses.

"In his prepared statement, he said, 'we are anxious to preserve and develop a healthy domestic industry, but it will still be necessary to import in order further to supplement our own production.'"

He said the department does not believe that exports of petroleum and petroleum products "should be prohibited or drastically curtailed. To do so would upset the world system of distribution and make petroleum a source of international friction."

But Foster said that future requirements for petroleum exports would be examined "in terms of their urgency, the ability of the United States to supply, with due consideration for the needs of the domestic economy," and export quotas for the various countries then would be fixed.

New Agreement
Stresses Growing Importance of Area

By Frederick Kuh
Chicago Sun Foretels Service

London, July 8.—Four of the world's giant oil companies lately concluded a new secret pact. The Washington Post and The Chicago Sun are able to divulge a complete summary of the important points of the official text which was agreed to in London June 1.

The big production increase foreseen for the Iraq oilfields—taken together with the growing output in Iran and Saudi Arabia—enormously heightens the importance of the Middle East in the struggle for oil and in preparations for a future war. This development clinches for the Middle East a place second only to the United States as the leading oil source of this planet.

The secret pact means, first, a further significant move by rival concerns to recognize the monopoly position of United States oil companies in Saudi Arabia, one of the richest petroleum regions anywhere; second, an intention to increase by six times the present four million tons annual output of the Iraq oilfields, attainment of this target being contemplated within five to 10 years; third, the laying of a new large pipe line to give Iraq petroleum another outlet to the Mediterranean whence it will be shipped to the world's markets.

Replaces Former Pact
This pact replaces the agreement concluded 19 years ago by the same Big Four and their little Armenian brother.

Signatories of the new agreement are the major partners of the Iraq Petroleum Co. (IPC), each of which owns 23 1/2 per cent of the shares of this concern. They are Standard of New Jersey and Socony Vacuum, which for this purpose appear as one corporation; the British government-controlled Anglo-Iranian Oil Co.; Royal Dutch, and the French government-controlled French Petroleum Co.

The pact will enter into force after the fifth partner, the Armenian G. S. Gulbenkian gives his approval. Gulbenkian, whose usual residence is in Lisbon, has only a five per cent holding in IPC.

Six Principal Changes
The new agreement contains six principal changes from the 1928 pact which it is to replace. They are:

1. Standard of New Jersey and Socony win complete freedom to join Standard of California and Standard of Texas in exploiting Saudi Arabian oil wells as an American pressure.

2. Exploitation of oil fields belonging to the IPC shall no longer be subject to a joint obligatory decision of at least three major groups but shall henceforth operate if necessary by the decision of any one group.

3. A further clause provides compensation for groups which may be incapacitated (perhaps by strikes or war) from drawing their share of IPC petroleum. The indemnity shall be paid by the concern which has taken the incapacitated company's share.

4. Iraq oil development for the period 1952 to 1956 inclusive has just been fixed. Besides completion of two 16-inch pipelines now under construction, it provides for the building of a new pipeline of larger diameter connecting Kirkuk with the Mediterranean. It shall allow the IPC to produce a total of 23 million to 26 million tons a year during the 1953-1956 period (IPC output is now about four million tons annually).

5. It has been agreed to submit to an arbitration tribunal the French company's claim for indemnity for the Iraq oil which was prevented from acquiring during the war.

Frederick, Md., Commemorates 83d Anniversary Of Its Civil War Ransoming With Colorful Pageantry

"UP THE STREET CAME THE REBEL TREAD . . ."—And, as history recalls, the bankers of Frederick shelled out to keep the town from being sacked and burned. In a reenactment of the scene, Elmer I. Eschleman, president of the Western Maryland Trust Co., hands over a bag of money to "Gen. Jubal Early" and his raiders

"SHOOT, IF YOU MUST . . ."—Of course, no one did, as Mrs. Mary E. Kelly, a distant relative of Dame Barbara Fritchie, confronted "Confederate soldiers" at Frederick, Md., yesterday in a scene recalling the eighty-third anniversary of Stonewall Jackson's sweep north in the War Between the States.

By Henry Decker
Post Staff Correspondent

Frederick, Md., July 9.—Grey-clad Confederates, on horse and afoot, marched through this town today, demanding and collecting war's ransom on threat to sack and burn.

Occasion was the eighty-third anniversary of the day grimmer soldiers did just that so successfully that citizens here are still paying off.

Rain marred the commemorative day, which also brought reenactment of Barbara Fritchie's defiance of Stonewall Jackson and the Battle of Monocacy, but did not dampen enthusiasm of the actors. They included town officials, bankers and leading merchants.

A goodly portion of this town's 20,000 inhabitants crowded the historical center to watch Gen. Jubal Early (William E. Hardy, radio station general manager and Junior Chamber of Commerce president) accept with authenticated disdain plump moneybags on his swordpoint. Bankers saw it there was no money in them, this time.

The crowds watched also, from rain-free vantage points, as costumed men entered the town shops to portray Civil War requisitioning by invading troops.

Everyone was in high humor and there was no cringing behind counters.

The pageantry moved along later over the 1862 route of Gen. Stonewall Jackson to the restored home of Barbara Fritchie. Here, Mrs. Mary E. Kelly, about 85 and a distant kin to the 96-year-old Dame Barbara, shouted her defiance to the Confederate-costumed "General," in the words of John Greenleaf Whittier:

"Shoot if you must this old gray head, but spare your country's flag," she said.

The whole town picnicked in the afternoon on grounds of the Maryland School for the Deaf, "Union forces" of the 115th Infantry, Maryland National Guard, there reenacted the Battle of Monocacy. Today's site was more convenient than the original battleground, along the Monocacy River 3 miles away.

A public address system informed the uninformed that had it not been for Gen. Lew Wallace (who later wrote "Ben Hur"), and his delaying fight there, Washington, D. C., might have later fallen to Confederate forces.

The public address system in earlier ceremonies on the steps of the Fredericktown Savings Institution also explained why some of the bankers were clad in present-day garb. This was done, the announcement said, to remind citizens that the original $200,000 town levy of General Early is still being paid back through town taxes. The full debt, which with interest over the years more closely approximates $600,000, is expected to be retired entirely by 1951.

For years past, the city debt to banks which had supplied the ransom money was repaid by a system of canceling out their taxes. That was later changed for cash payments through a city bonding issue to retire the debt. Current payments have been reduced to approximately $1500 a year.

Repeated efforts to have Congress reimburse the town for the levy have failed of passage in both the Senate and the House.

The levy was made after General Early proclaimed: "Officers will, by force if necessary, and under imperative threat to sack the town, otherwise, compel the Mayor, City Assembly, bankers and leading citizens to assemble and comply with the Commanding General's demands immediately."

Most of the costumed members of today's pageantry are members of the Frederick Junior Chamber of Commerce, the pageant sponsors. Others were citizens recruited here and members of the Lost Stirrup Riding Club of Woodboro, Md., 12 miles to the north of here.

The festivities were preserved for posterity by movie cameras. All the leading merchants, bankers, mayor and aldermen donned costumes of the period to participate in the making of the documentary film, based on public records here.

Canada's Aims Cited
Ottawa, July 9 (P).—Defense Minister Brooke Claxton proposed a 240-million-dollar defense budget today, saying one of Canada's aims was "cooperation with countries of the Commonwealth, the United States and other like-minded countries in working out common standards, planning and training." He told Commons the sum would cover estimates for the fiscal year ending next March 31.

Gen. Handy to Succeed Wainwright Sept. 1

Gen. Thomas T. Handy, Army deputy chief of staff, will succeed Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, hero of Corregidor, as commander of the Fourth Army with headquarters at San Antonio, Tex., when Wainwright retires.

The War Department said yesterday that Wainwright would leave the service August 31. Handy will assume command the next day. The new deputy chief will be Lieut. Gen. J. Lawton Collins, war-time commander of the Seventh Army Corps in the European campaign and currently chief of information of the War Department.

Eddy Succeeds Collins

Succeeding Collins as information chief will be Maj. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, now deputy commander of the Second Army at its headquarters in Baltimore.

Wainwright, 64, whose Army career dates back to 1906, has said he would become an executive with a grocery chain with headquarters in San Antonio. Upon his return to the United States from a Japanese prison camp, President Truman decorated Wainwright with the Medal of Honor, the Nation's highest military award, for his heroic defense of the Philippines after Gen. Douglas MacArthur was ordered to Australia to begin preparations for the southwest Pacific offensive.

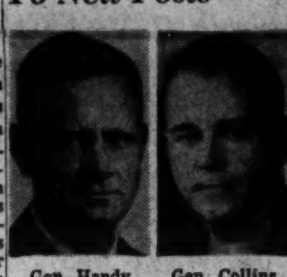

Handy has been mentioned, among others, in speculation over a successor for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, chief of staff, who will retire next year to become president of Columbia University.

Handy, a native of Spring City, Tenn., is 55 and a graduate of Virginia Military Institute. Commissioned in 1916, he saw action in France in World War I. He came to Washington first in 1936 on assignment with the operations section of the general staff, left for a year of duty at Fort Benning, Ga., and came back in 1941 to the war plans division here. Handy was appointed assistant chief of staff for the operations division in June, 1942, and deputy chief of staff for the Army in October, 1944.

Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, now on duty in the office of the chief of staff, will succeed Eddy as deputy commander of the Second Army.

Prior to reorganization of the Army last year, Eddy, a native of Chicago, was in charge of the Third Service Command with headquarters at Baltimore. He saw action with infantry outfits in North Africa, Sicily and the invasion of France and then was assigned command of the Twelfth Corps.

Nation Urged To Admit DPs As Example

By The Associated Press

Right Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady said yesterday the United States has a choice between finding homes for a share of Europe's war refugees or "turning Europe over to communism."

Just back from South American conferences to open new channels for resettlement of displaced persons, the secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities supported a measure calling for admission of 400,000 refugees to this country over a four-year period.

Appearing before a House Judiciary Subcommittee, he testified that "if the United States adopted a positive policy" in admitting some of the refugees "it would be the best inducement to other American countries to do likewise."

He said that during five months in South America he had seen a "very decided change" in attitude towards admitting displaced persons with Brazil planning to take in over 60,000 in the next year and Argentina becoming "immigration-minded."

To Visit German Camps

He will leave tomorrow to visit the displaced persons camps in Germany.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Philip Hannah told the committee the admission of 400,000 refugees would "actually increase our economic well-being."

Hannah declared: "The assumption of this responsibility is entirely in keeping both with our tradition of providing haven for the oppressed, and our present position of leadership in the world."

The subcommittee is considering the measure by Representative Stratton (R., Ill.) to admit 100,000 such persons a year for four years.

Arguments against the proposal, Hannah said, are based on "the erroneous belief that in any given country during any particular period there are just so many jobs to be filled, and that an increase in population inevitably means that some must go jobless."

U. S. Shortages Cited

He estimated that of the 100,000 who would be admitted each year after the Stratton bill, not more than 60,000 would be of working age or in need of employment.

"This number," Hannah said, "is so small compared to our total labor force of 80 million as to present no problem of competition with native workers."

He added "many of these people will meet labor needs that have gone unfilled for some time." Among them he listed construction workers, nurses, dentists, physicians, farm help, machinists, railway workers and tool makers—all, he said, "in short supply in various parts of the country."

Senate Passes Unification Bill

Secretary of War—the latter renamed the Secretary of the Army.

All three departments, plus other defense agencies, would be under a Secretary of National Security, who would sit in the President's Cabinet. He would exercise broad general powers over the three defense departments, with the Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force administering their departments as individual units.

New Agencies Planned

A joint staff of 100 officers would be created, but it would be subordinate to the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The latter, made permanent by the bill, will remain the top military advisers to the President.

Several important new agencies would be created to provide better coordination of military and foreign policy, and better planning for industrial and civilian mobilization in time of war, and conservation of national resources.

As originally proposed by War Department chiefs two years ago, Army-Navy "merger" would have consolidated all the armed forces under one department of national defense, with a single secretary, single general staff, and a powerful single chief of staff.

Safeguards Added

Violent Navy reaction blocked passage of this plan, and at President Truman's insistence, the service chiefs got together on the present plan. The Senate committee added several safeguards to preserve the existence and status of naval aviation, the Marine Corps, and the rights and powers of the three department heads under the top secretary.

But the language used was not strong enough for Senator McCarthy—a former Marine—and some other Senators. They protested that Army and Air Forces still planned to take over marine amphibious duties and land-based naval reconnaissance and anti-submarine planes.

War Training Of One Year Asked in Bill

By The Associated Press
Representative Towe (R., N. J.) introduced legislation yesterday to set up a universal military training program calling for six months of basic training for qualified male youths between their eighteenth and twentieth birthdays.

Six additional months of membership would be required in a reserve officers training corps, National Guard, or other reserve organization.

The American Legion and the American Veterans' organizations, supporting the training program before the committee yesterday.

On the other side, officials of the Young Progressive Citizens of America, the American Veterans Committee and the Socialist Party opposed such legislation.

The viewpoints of the organizations were given before the House Armed Services Committee which is conducting hearings on President Truman's plea for the training plan recommended by his special commission.

Fears Defense Collapse
S. Perry Brown, the Legion's national defense committee chairman, said the long range national defense program would "collapse" without universal training.

Brown said such a plan is vital and "our reserve component is now a featherweight fighter in a world of heavyweights."

The Amvets filed a statement declaring the training plan "is unfortunately necessary," adding "there appears to be no other way in which the security of the country can be maintained."

William G. Gausmann, Washington, representing the Socialist Party, said "our military defense program must be considered as a subordinate item in a program of political and economic security."

He advocated universal disarmament, creation of an international police force, and the status of a limited world government for the United Nations.

Asks Army Reforms
Richard Bolling, national vice chairman of the American Veterans Committee, called for social and economic reorganization of the armed forces and flatly opposed universal training in peace time.

The United Nations should be strengthened and given monopoly control of war weapons and power to enforce disarmament, Bolling said.

Erwin Lepow of Ames, Iowa, representing the Young Progressive Citizens of America, called the proposals "an implied assumption that war is inevitable within the next decade."

"We view universal military training as another step in a unilateral policy that fails to recognize the urgency of United Nations' action and must eventually lead to war," Lepow testified.

Blind Mother, 85, Charges Fraud in Deed to Rubinoff

Pittsburgh, July 9 (P).—Blind Mrs. Libbie Rubinoff, 85, today asked a court to cancel a deed to her home that she signed June 6, conveying the property to her son, Violinist Dave Rubinoff of Encino, Calif.

Mrs. Rubinoff charged in her complaint that she couldn't see what she was signing, and didn't know it was the deed until she learned the house had been advertised for sale and prospective purchasers visited her home.

She also asked the court for an injunction to restrain her son from selling the property or advertising it for sale.

Mrs. Rubinoff said she signed the paper after her son assured her she would own the property as long as she lived and that he would pay the maintenance and tax bills for the place.

No Leakage Feared From Incident, Says Sen. Hickenlooper

By Alfred Friendly

Post Reporter

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, yesterday disclosed to the Senate that two former Army sergeants had stolen certain "important documents" from the Los Alamos (N. Mex.) atomic bomb laboratory.

But, he revealed, the documents had since been recovered by the FBI and there are "sound" indications that they were never made available to any unauthorized persons." Hickenlooper said the sergeants who filched the files were "souvenir hunters."

His explanation, which later in the day was restated by the FBI, was occasioned by a news story appearing in the New York Sun yesterday, under a big three-line banner. It asserted that "unknown agents" had stolen documents from atomic enemy plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

It continued, for two columns, to recite allegations reflecting on the security of the Atomic Energy Commission, contrasting it unfavorably with the situation when atomic developments were under Army control.

As disclosed by Hickenlooper and the FBI, the theft took place at Los Alamos, not Oak Ridge. It was accomplished in March, 1946, when the work was under military control. The theft was discovered in April, 1947, by the civilian Atomic Energy Commission.

It was reported at once to the FBI, and on June 17, to the Joint Congressional Committee. The FBI did not state how long it took to track down and recover the files, but apparently the detection was made with dispatch.

The Justice Department declined to reveal the culprits' names, but disclosed that they were not under arrest and had not been charged. Its attorneys, however, are conferring with regard to what course of action should be taken.

Hickenlooper said that the sergeants had been assigned by the Army to the department at Los Alamos where the papers were kept and had access to them in pursuit of their daily duties. He added that the past records of the two men had been excellent. The FBI investigation showed that they had kept the papers in their own files and had not shown them to anyone.

Hickenlooper praised the AEC for its "vigorous and intelligent" security efforts. He said that "no effective breach of security in those instances was accomplished and that the security was in fact maintained even though there was a surreptitious removal of certain important documents."

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), author of the act which created civilian control, told the Senate he congratulated the AEC "for their vigilance in discovering the incident . . . so soon after they took over the control of the organization."

He said it was "somewhat regrettable that the story which has appeared, has so far deviated from what are the facts in the case."

The Sun's story said its revelation "is expected to blast the Nation's atomic energy setup into a total reorganization. Full details, when revealed, will rival the Canadian atom bomb spy story, the alarmed informants of the Sun predicted."

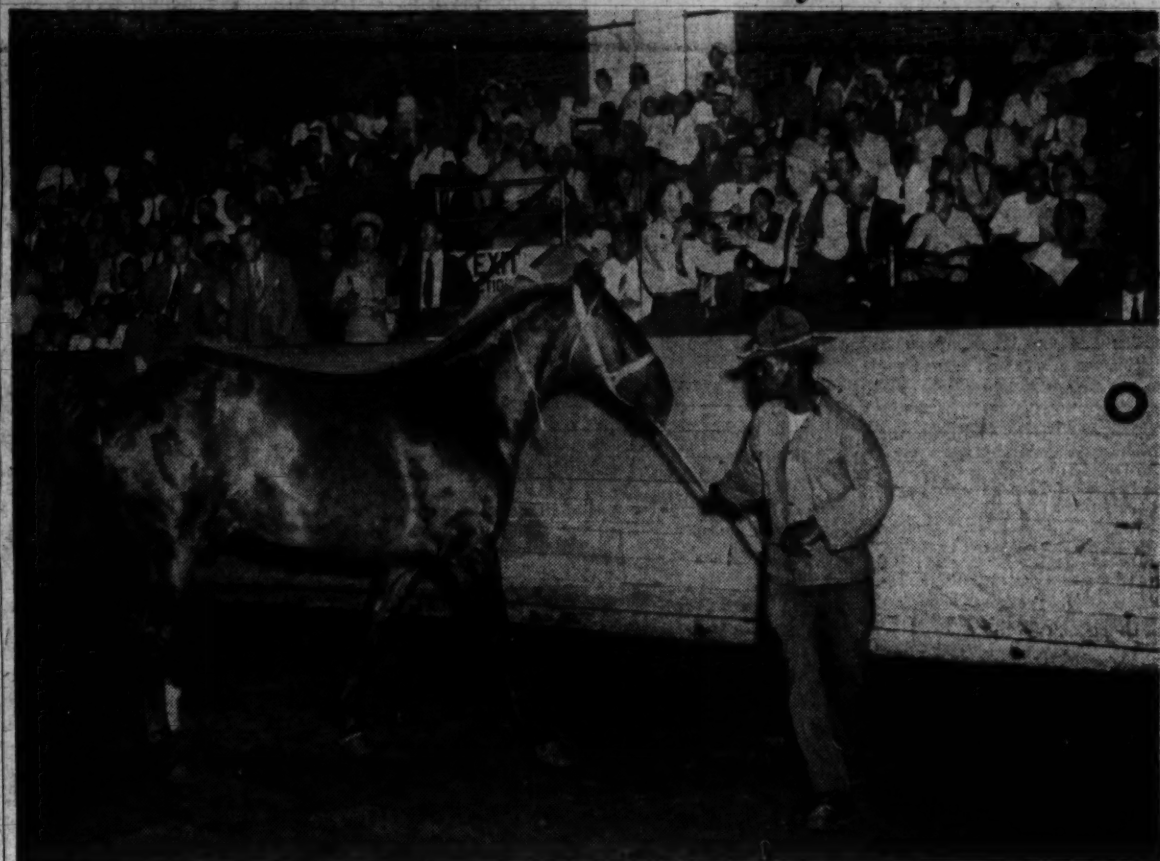

Members of the congressional committee, it went on, "are frightened, baffled and presumably disgusted." It related how FBI agents and security police were grilling Oak Ridge employees and seeking "to repair the damaging security leak by recovering the missing data."

"The civilian atomic energy control," the Sun pointed out, "is in its infancy compared to the military's experience in the field, but it is expected that demands for a revision of the present program will be conducted unsparingly."

The article blasted the security provisions at Oak Ridge, and declared that Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities investigation, said that the Sun's revelations came "as no surprise to me."

Apparently unaware that the documents were purloined when Los Alamos and Oak Ridge were under the Army's Manhattan District, the Sun reporter wrote:

Stop Russian Expansion, Says De Gaulle

Paris, July 9 (U.P.).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle said today that unless Russian expansion is stopped Europe is doomed to enslavement and the world will face a new global war.

Asserting that Russian influence had now swept over two thirds of Europe, de Gaulle said at a luncheon of the Anglo-American Press Association:

"As far as the world is concerned, its destiny would only be an immense and fatal war."

De Gaulle, emerging as the French right wing leader, laid down three conditions for rebuilding Europe:

1. That all European countries, including Italy and the former Axis satellites, should be allowed to resume their old place in Europe.
2. That external aid, particularly from the United States, should be available for Europe.
3. That Britain and France maintain a close and sincere relationship.

"Thomas and others who were skeptical at the time De Gaulle was appointed to head the peacetime atomic energy development program pointed out that someone with training in security was needed. Not doubting Lillenthal's loyalty, critics were outspoken in their fears that the very thing that has happened would result if the Army was deprived of its security activity."

Thomas, in addition, assailed the security attitude of officers of this branch of the civilian development who complained that they had to go along in removing suspected individuals. Along with other members of the Un-American Activities Committee, Thomas has fought continuously for Army supervision of atom bomb security. He made numerous speeches from the House floor speeches written extensively about the dangers of the Reds at Oak Ridge.

French Strike Of 1,500,000 Looms Tonight

Paris, July 9 (U.P.).—The strike committee for 1,500,000 municipal and Federal employees threatened tonight to call the largest and most crippling walkout in recent French history unless the government met workers' wage demands by midnight tomorrow.

Day-long negotiations between government officials and union leaders apparently ended in a deadlock. After conferring with Premier Paul Ramadier tonight, the strike committee said:

"The committee recalls that Thursday, July 10, at midnight, the time limit for the government answer expires. This was agreed upon by both the committee and the government."

A committee spokesman said he would make known later when the strike would begin and how long it would last.

MIT Man's Missing Daughter Is Found

Boston, July 9 (P).—Prof. Robley D. Evans, Massachusetts Institute of Technology physicist, said tonight his missing daughter, Nadia, 13, sought since she disappeared Monday night from a New Hampshire summer camp, had returned safely. Evans told newsmen his daughter was now in a Boston hospital.

An MIT spokesman for Professor Evans said the blonde youngster was "found this afternoon on Boston Common in good condition." The spokesman said the girl told her father she had run away from the New Hampshire summer camp, apparently in dissatisfaction with camp life.

Conferees Agree on Export Control Bill

By The Associated Press
Senate and House conferees agreed yesterday on the final version of legislation extending export and import controls over scarce commodities beyond July 15. The measure, still subject to final approval by both houses, continues the program now authorized only by a 15-day stop-gap resolution enacted before the previous law's expiration on June 30. Senator Cooper (R., Ky.), who handled the measure in the Senate, told a reporter the conferees compromised on an extension through next February 28. The House had voted an extension until January 31 and the Senate until June 30.

They retained, however, Senate language placing authority for the program in the hands of the Secretary of Commerce, which Cooper said would centralize responsibility for supervision.

Eliminated in the compromise version was a provision in the Senate bill for continued controls over manila and other types of fiber and cordage. The conferees agreed, however, to retain controls over rice and its products as the Senate had voted. Rice was eliminated in the House.

Other materials on which emergency wartime controls are extended by the legislation include tin and tin products, except for imports of tin ores and concentrates; antimony; materials required for export to aid foreign production of products urgently needed in the United States; fats and oils; and materials needed for export to help carry out this country's foreign policy.

Ice Cream, Too Pet Squirrel Is Nuts About Ball Games

DEAN HILLENBRAND, Post carrier boy of 1802 Quincy st., Arlington, poses with pet squirrel, who likes ice cream, baseball, and, naturally, his owner

Deane Hillenbrand, 13, 1802 South Quincy st., Arlington, a Washington Post carrier boy for the last two years, is the proud owner of a pet squirrel who likes ice cream, baseball—and Deane.

Deane and some friends found the week-old chatterbox nearly two months ago in woods near the Hillenbrand home. They fed the pet with an eye-dropper until it graduated to the nut-eating stage. The squirrel—"a she, we think"—is an ardent sports fan. When Deane takes her to baseball games, "she sits on my shoulder and the people watch her instead of the game."

The fast-growing gray rodent will eat "just about anything"—peanut butter, watermelon seeds, carrots, ice cream.

Deane's mother, Mrs. Christine Hillenbrand, may have raised an inquiring eyebrow when the pet came home for the first time, "but she's used to it now," her son says.

The squirrel, which has no particular name, is barred from the house, though. "She stays in a cage built for her in our cherry tree," Deane explains.

Although Deane's two dogs accompany him regularly on his 42-paper Post route, the squirrel prefers to remain at home. Beside occasional jaunts to baseball games, the pet occasionally accompanies her boss to the Thomas Jefferson School—in his pocket.

General Foods Official Sees '48 Price Drop

By The Associated Press

Clarence Francis, chairman of the board of General Foods Corp., predicted yesterday that average food prices may be down "as much as 15 per cent" by harvest time in 1948.

Francis made no specific forecast as to what may happen to prices in the meantime.

But the United States Chamber of Commerce in another statement prepared for the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report declared that if the Marshall plan for rehabilitation of Europe goes into effect it is "likely to involve a very considerable upward pressure on many commodities."

Emerson P. Schmidt of the United States Chamber of Commerce said the wage increase won by John L. Lewis' mine workers probably will touch off a general demand for higher pay.

Schmidt, director of the chamber's economic research department, told the committee that for this reason he believes the coal settlement is inflationary.

And before the committee convened, Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), a member, told a reporter that the key to stabilization of America's economy is the rehabilitation of Europe and Asia.

Francis told the committee he believes a "corrective" in food prices is under way and that "the average prices paid for food by domestic consumers may be as much as 15 per cent lower by the time the harvests of 1948 are gathered."

He added: "By this I don't mean to imply anything like a wide open break in prices. Such a break would probably occur only in a depression... and we don't foresee anything as drastic as that."

In citing reasons for his prediction that food prices will slide, Francis said that food lately has been "getting more than its usual share of the consumer dollar."

"We regard that as a warning signal," he declared. "To us it means that food is in for stiff competition from new automobiles, appliances and housing. In fact, the competition has begun, and higher rents may have some further effect."

Dealing with the role of food processors in the food price picture, Francis said the factors which dictate what the housewife pays "are largely outside the control of the processor."

He added that during the 12 months starting in March, 1946, General Foods had to pay higher prices ranging from 220 per cent more for cocoa and 113 per cent more for coffee to 36 per cent more for sugar, 50 per cent for corn and 54 per cent for wheat.

"Today we are working on the smallest (profit) margins in the history of the company," Francis said. "If this is true with us, I believe it to be true of the industry."

Schmidt told the committee the proposed Marshall plan for Europe "will mean that we will have less to consume here, with additional upward pressure on our price structure."

Schmidt added that this in turn "will set in motion a generalized union wage demand across the economy."

The chamber witness said he was not arguing against the Marshall plan, but that if it is put into effect, "the American people will have to recognize that through one means or another their standard of living must shrink."

Such shrinkage, he went on, could be made effective "in several ways or in a combination" of these ways.

1. Rationing, price and wage control.

2. "Exceedingly heavy" taxation to drain off excess money demand.

3. Government borrowing out of savings.

4. Inflation.

Schmidt said there is a theory prevalent today that "by taking toll of consumers in general, for the benefit of selected groups of organized labor, the total of our purchasing power is somehow increased.

Congress Sees Blast Answered the Doorbell Sugar Surplus For Five Years

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Congress looked forward yesterday to a surplus of sugar, which was one of the country's shortest commodities until a few weeks ago, within the next five years.

As the House started debate on a new bill tying down restrictions on sugar imports for that period the Senate Finance Committee reported out a similar measure.

Determined opposition that immediately arose, promised a hot floor fight on the measure when it is taken up again today.

Focus of the opposition was on the allocation of imports of 910,000 short tons for Puerto Rico. This opposition was led by Representative Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.) of the subcommittee on Insular Affairs of the House Public Lands Committee, and A. Fernos-Isern, resident-commissioner of Puerto Rico.

Allocation Held Insufficient

Both raised the objection that the allocation for Puerto Rico was not enough to take care of Puerto Rican production, upped at the request of the United States during the war.

Although the allocation was agreed to by one group of Puerto Rico sugar producers, objectors were not given a hearing by either the Senate Finance or the House Agriculture Committees in studying the bill, they declared.

A basic quota of 4,368,000 short tons would be established under the bill for domestic sugar producing areas, as follows:

Domestic beet sugar, 1,800,000 tons; mainland cane sugar 500,000; Hawaii, 1,052,000; Puerto Rico, 910,000, and Virgin Islands, 600,000.

Cuba Gets Big Cut

The Philippines would get an allotment of 952,000 tons, as provided in the Philippine Trade Act. Of the remainder that may be needed, Cuba would be allowed to supply 98.64 per cent.

The Senate bill differs from the House measure in that it would continue the sugar processing tax to finance payments to domestic producers.

Representative John W. Flannagan (D., Va.) declined to speak in opposition to the bill yesterday, declaring he wished his statement in opposition to be heard by a full membership of the House.

The bill, Committee Chairman Hope (R., Kans.) explained, directs the Secretary of Agriculture in determining import quotas to "protect the consumers as well as sugar producers."

EXPLOSION KILLS WOMAN—Kenneth Gusack, 8, and Thomas White, Jr., 11, right, of the 6700 block of Conway ave., Hampshire Knolls, in Prince Georges County, went to call on their neighborhood friends, the Backus children. Just as they arrived, an explosion shattered the Backus home. Thomas ran home and told his mother. Firemen found Mrs. Charlotte Backus of 6716 Conway ave. and her two children badly burned. Mrs. Backus died four hours later in Washington Sanitarium.

Russia Pays U. S. $4,170,000 Interest

By The Associated Press
Russia has paid $4,170,000 to the United States as part payment for interest due July 1 on the lend-lease "pipe line agreement," the State Department announced yesterday.

The Soviet payment represents the first installment of the 30-year credit arrangement agreed to October 15, 1945.

The United States then extended Russia 251 million dollars in credit to pay for goods en route or already ordered when lend-lease was shut off on VJ-Day. About 18 million dollars of these supplies have been held up by congressional refusal to authorize shipments.

As the Senate prepared for its second tax round, Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R., Mass.), accused President Truman of trying to "invade the constitutional function and right of Congress to levy taxes."

Said Martin in a radio broadcast: "The strength of the House of Representatives and of the whole Congress has always been in its control of the purse strings. It is necessary for the eightieth Congress to protect this prerogative so the checks and balances in Government may be maintained, as they were intended by the Founding Fathers to be maintained under our Constitution."

"Neither dare we forget that the subversionists of this country will, if possible, try to create resentment through heavy taxation and high prices."

2 Montgomery Men to Head Commissions

Two Montgomery County men were named by Governor William Preston Lane yesterday to head Maryland commissions dealing with veterans' welfare.

E. Brooke Lee, Montgomery County real estate man and Democratic leader, was named to head the new Maryland Veterans Housing Commission authorized by the 1947 General Assembly.

Also named to this commission were Henry P. Irv, chairman of the Maryland Planning Commission; Thomas Finan, Cumberland attorney; Harry H. Cropper, Salisbury attorney, and Assistant Attorney General Joseph D. Buscher.

The commission is charged with making a statewide survey to determine areas that need additional housing for veterans and to help local groups get that housing.

The Governor also directed State Auditor Daniel L. Clayland to check operations of the Maryland Veterans Commission for the past five years and named Alexander K. Hancock, auditor and Montgomery County comptroller, as head of a three-man investigating commission to review the state auditor's report.

'Slave' Holds No Bitterness, Court Is Told

San Diego, Calif., July 9 (AP).—There is no bitterness in the heart of Dora Jones, a psychiatrist-physician testified today at the Federal Court trial of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wesley Ingalls, charged with enslaving the Negro by years of threats and drugging.

The 58-year-old maid-of-all-work was pictured by Dr. Harold O. Cozby, prosecution expert, as being cheerfully "resigned to her lot."

He testified that her attitude of "submission" and "dependence" could be traced to her background as a Negro born in Alabama in 1890 and brought to Washington, D. C., as a girl of 16 or 17 "to be subjected to authority" as a household maid.

The prosecution charges that when about 20, was seduced by Mrs. Ingalls' first husband, Walter Harmon of Washington, and that thereafter she was reduced to slavery by Mrs. Ingalls—and Ingalls after their marriage in 1918 by fear of jail and hell because of the old affair.

Dr. Cozby testified that his physical examination of Dora showed no evidence of diabetes. She had testified that she was told by Mrs. Ingalls during the period of sugar rationing that she had the disease and should avoid sweets.

Ship Splits on Rocks

'Me First' Idea Wrecks Autos, Optimists Told

An "improper attitude" of the motorist is the principal cause of traffic accidents, George E. Keneipp, District director of traffic, said yesterday.

Speaking at the luncheon meeting of the Optimist Club, Keneipp said that too many motorists have the "me first" philosophy when driving.

"It's a problem for the psychiatrist and not the traffic department," Keneipp said.

Among other major causes of accidents listed by the traffic director were too much reliance on mechanical equipment and failure to appreciate the actions of others, especially the unpredictable actions of children and old people.

Keneipp criticized methods of determining the effectiveness of traffic safety programs by comparing accidents of one year with those of another.

A better method is to compare accidents with miles driven in Washington, as determined by gasoline sales, he said.

AFL Urges Repeat Fight On Labor Law

By The Associated Press
The heads of 105 AFL unions, unanimously agreed yesterday to challenge the constitutionality of the Taft-Hartley Labor Bill in the courts and work for the defeat of every member of Congress who supported the measure.

The AFL leadership, assembled in emergency session by President William Green, decided also to wipe out future "no strike" provisions in all AFL contracts.

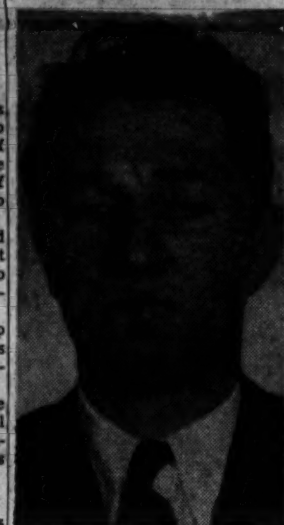

A five-man committee drew up a declaration of policy which was adopted by more than 250 top representatives of all AFL unions.

"Because we believe many of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley bill are unconstitutional, we will challenge the validity of said sections in the courts," it said.

To Press for Repeat
Meanwhile, the AFL will press for repeal of the law "as a slave measure, un-American, vicious and destructive to labor's constitutional rights."

"We will organize, unite and concentrate our efforts toward bringing about the defeat of every member of Congress for reelection who voted in favor of final enactment of the Taft-Hartley bill."

Felled by Prowler With Meat Ax

PVT. W. J. SARTAIN, Sixth Precinct policeman, suffered serious injuries when attacked by a prowler with a meat ax early yesterday.

Meat-Cleaver Attacker of Policeman Sought

A thief who attacked a metropolitan policeman with a meat cleaver after being surprised leaving the scene of a robbery was the object of a widespread police search last night.

The policeman attacked by the thief was Pvt. William J. Sartain, 31, of the Sixth Precinct. He suffered serious head and neck wounds and was reported in good condition last night at Walter Reed Hospital after an operation.

According to police, Private Sartain, who was found slumped across the curb in front of Poppino's Grill, 6525 Georgia ave. n.w., shortly after 2 a. m. yesterday, identified his attacker as a Negro of slender build, about 5 feet 6 inches tall, wearing a blue suit and a straw hat.

Pvt. Sartain said he stopped the man to question him about several paper bags he was carrying and the man immediately attacked him with the meat cleaver.

Police found that Poppino's Grill had been robbed of $150 in cash and a meat cleaver. They also found a paper bag containing $25 in change near where Private Sartain was slumped on the curb, and several blocks away, at 9th st. and Piney Branch rd. n.w., they recovered the meat cleaver used in the attack.

Private Sartain lives at 511 Dartmouth ave., Silver Spring, Md. He is a brother of Detective Sgt. James Sartain.

'Unlawful' Coal Contract 90% Signed

Despite claims by Representative Hartley (R., N. J.) that the new coal contract was in "clear violation" of the labor law of which he is co-author, more than 90 per cent of the coal industry had accepted it last night.

The last major bloc of hold-outs, the Southern operators, agreed to its terms yesterday afternoon. By nightfall, associations representing all but three Southern States had actually signed the record-breaking document.

Operators in those three States, Virginia, Tennessee and Alabama, agreed to the contract but delayed signing pending clarification of an apparent conflict between its terms and State laws preventing the union shop and check-off.

Owners Liable, Hartley Says

The only other mines not covered were those in States west of the Mississippi. Their owners are expected to accept the contract within a few days. Meantime, in other areas, owners predicted that operations would be almost back to normal by today. Yesterday, great majorities of the miners in the northern Appalachian area had streamed back to work under the best contract in their history.

Hartley, chairman of the House Labor Committee, protested the contract yesterday, asserting that it "reflects collusion between the mine operators and the United Mine Workers with the intention of violating the law."

He claimed that an agreement under which the owners would check off sums from the miners' wages for union dues, initiation fees and assessments, was in clear violation of the Taft-Hartley Act. Owners would face criminal charges with a maximum penalty of $10,000 fine and a year's imprisonment, he said.

The law forbids payment to the union by the employers of any money except for welfare funds and union dues. It was the assessments and initiation fees which Mr. Hartley considered could not be checked off.

In addition, he said in a prepared statement, other sections "violate the spirit and intent of the law."

"For example, the contract covers the employment of miners only during the time as such persons are able and willing to work. The law meant for labor unions to become responsible organizations."

"Secondly, the mine operators have thrown away the legal protections given them by the new law. This agreement provides 'that any and all disputes, stoppages, suspensions of work and any and all claims, demands or acts growing therefrom must be determined exclusively' by the machinery provided in the agreement itself."

"The section dealing with welfare funds, while technically in conformity with the law, establishes a three-man board of trustees, with John L. Lewis as chairman to spend the vast sums collected."

"But it is not these and other violations that concern me at this time."

"This agreement constitutes an irreparable blow to the economic stability of the country."

These concessions do not perceptibly weaken the bargaining power of the union in respect of the issues that are the chief concern of the miners. Indeed both miners and operators are hailing the agreement as an outstanding example of what can be achieved through free collective bargaining. At the same time, it seems highly probable that in the absence of legislation providing for a soft coal strike, the parties to the present contract might have shown less eagerness to settle their differences.

The provisions of the contract that have attracted most attention are the sections designed to avoid resort to the conciliation machinery set up under the new law and to escape the penalties resulting from nonobservance of the legal obligation to give 60 days' notice of the termination or modification of a contract. The coal contract provides that either party may terminate it on a 30 days' notice and adds somewhat ambiguously that the agreement shall cover employees during such time as they are "able and willing to work." It further provides that all disputes, work stoppages, etc., shall be settled by machinery set up by the contracting parties—a proposal clearly designed to protect the union from suits for damages or breach of contract.

The Taft-Hartley Labor Act is intended to provide protection for minority groups and the general public as well as to put collective bargaining on a more equitable basis as between employers and employees. Consequently the act gives such broad powers to the NLRB to deal with unfair labor practices that it will be difficult, probably impossible, for the UMW to evade its prohibitions by means of private agreements. Even so, the UMW will be in a position to function in comparative freedom from legal restraints. The only thing that Mr. Lewis really has to fear is a turn in the business tide that would cause the mine operators to refuse to submit to his demands.

Plain Economics

A lot of irritation is bound to arise in this country over the economics that accompanies the jeremiads of Labor government spokesmen in Britain. Take, for example, Wednesday's debate in the House of Commons. Dr. Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, made what the New York Times correspondent called "a striking allusion" to the British dilemma. He likened the present state of world trade to a children's marble game. The trouble lay in the fact that "one of the children is getting all the marbles," meaning the United States. Sooner or later—and, further in the debate, Mr. Herbert Morrison specified that this would be this fall—Britain would lose all its marbles, and the game could not go on. The simile was unworthy of a former professor of economics. World trade, like a children's game of marbles, is an interchange of skills as well as of resources. Insofar as competitive business goes, the game goes to the person who can deliver goods better or cheaper, or both. Britain is not altogether in the hands of the diabolical and deterministic fate that Dr. Dalton portrays.

Mr. Morrison's contribution to irritation consisted of the complacent view that America's only hope of making possible "prosperity and full employment in the United States" lies in a return to wartime lend-lease. This is as fallacious as Dr. Dalton's childish analogy. The Marshall plan is primarily an investment in world peace and not in our own prosperity. If, as a condition of our prosperity, we must give our products away, then we have many takers at home. We could embark, for instance, upon a Missouri Valley Authority instead of a Ruhr Coal Authority or a Danubian Valley Authority. Or we could give the bounty of our fields to people in our country who still haven't enough to eat. Mr. Morrison, unlike Dr. Dalton, has no background of economics, so that his misconception is less unpardonable. But he is a public man of long standing, and he should have at least a nodding acquaintance with economics.

The whole tenor of such observations is to exculpate the Labor government in Britain for putting reform before recovery. The impression is that it is economic facts and not either bad policy or too little effort that are responsible for Britain's woes. Nobody understands more than we do that the strain and stress that Britain has undergone entitle her to maximum consideration. But the responsibility for the present state of things is not entirely fate's. It is not all fate's fault that more coal is not dug, nor that Britain was caught in a coal crisis last winter. There was, for one thing, the refusal of the mine workers' chiefs to permit the use of Poles and other foreigners in England to work in the pits. Then there was the lack of elementary foresight on the government's part to ward off the coal crisis last winter. Nothing, as Oliver Wendell Holmes used to say, can be accomplished except through effort, not even the winning of a child's game of marbles; and it is America's hope that the effort will be forthcoming in Europe as a whole to use existing skills, install new ones and pool resources and markets so as to restore prosperity.

Lewis and The Law

After signing a new wage contract that is the most favorable ever negotiated, John L. Lewis took time out to denounce the "Taft slave act" and charge the Republican members of Congress with having sold out American industry for cash contributions to the congressional campaign. The best refutation of these scurrilous charges is to be found in the terms of the soft coal contract itself which clearly indicate that Mr. Lewis' power to drive a hard bargain has not been seriously impaired. True, Mr. Lewis has made certain concessions because of the new labor act. For instance, the contract just signed calls for a union shop, requiring the assent of a majority of the union members to legalize it. In effect, however, the UMW is as well protected as it was under the previous closed shop agreement so long as the industry remains strongly organized. The check-off of union dues is also to be continued, with the proviso that each union member must agree to the arrangement, as the law directs.

Mr. Lewis is sore about that provision of the labor act which deprives the union of the sole control of the welfare fund. But despite his assertion that the lawmakers intended to scuttle the fund, royalty payments into the fund are to be doubled, and Mr. Lewis emerges as chairman of the new administration board of three trustees, one representing the employers, another the employees and the third a neutral member acceptable to the operators and the union. The union has also receded from its demand for inclusion in the contract of mine foremen and other supervisory employees, thereby removing a cause of controversy that has led to costly strikes.

We think it can fairly be argued that these concessions do not perceptibly weaken the bargaining power of the union in respect of the issues that are the chief concern of the miners. Indeed both miners and operators are hailing the agreement as an outstanding example of what can be achieved through free collective bargaining. At the same time, it seems highly probable that in the absence of legislation providing for a soft coal strike, the parties to the present contract might have shown less eagerness to settle their differences.

The provisions of the contract that have attracted most attention are the sections designed to avoid resort to the conciliation machinery set up under the new law and to escape the penalties resulting from nonobservance of the legal obligation to give 60 days' notice of the termination or modification of a contract. The coal contract provides that either party may terminate it on a 30 days' notice and adds somewhat ambiguously that the agreement shall cover employees during such time as they are "able and willing to work." It further provides that all disputes, work stoppages, etc., shall be settled by machinery set up by the contracting parties—a proposal clearly designed to protect the union from suits for damages or breach of contract.

The Taft-Hartley Labor Act is intended to provide protection for minority groups and the general public as well as to put collective bargaining on a more equitable basis as between employers and employees. Consequently the act gives such broad powers to the NLRB to deal with unfair labor practices that it will be difficult, probably impossible, for the UMW to evade its prohibitions by means of private agreements. Even so, the UMW will be in a position to function in comparative freedom from legal restraints. The only thing that Mr. Lewis really has to fear is a turn in the business tide that would cause the mine operators to refuse to submit to his demands.

Perlman Case

In view of his dilatory tactics to date, Senator Ferguson's promise to hold three night hearings this week on the Perlman nomination is not altogether reassuring. What remains to be heard, since all relevant testimony has long since been in the record? Senator Ferguson now says he hopes his subcommittee will be able to end its hearings on Saturday and act on the nomination. It is of very great importance that this "hope" be realized. For the full Judiciary Committee meets on Monday—which will probably be its last opportunity to pass on the nomination and report it to the Senate in time for action this session.

"I know," declared Senator McGrath, himself a former Solicitor General, "that the Supreme Court relies greatly upon the availability of a Solicitor General. The court has no one else with whom to discuss the various ramifications of procedure in cases in which the United States is a party before that court—cases which involve the life and the liberties of our people, and millions, yes, billions of dollars." The Senate simply cannot in good conscience keep the Solicitor Generalship of the United States vacant any longer.

Hollywood Ending

About four years ago there was a story that the former King Carol of Romania, then living in exile with Mme. Lupescu in Mexico City, had engaged the famous Hollywood press agent, Mr. Russell Birdwell, to put him back in the news. The idea seems to have been that Carol, who still had some hopes of regaining his throne in the postwar settlement, was anxious that the statesmen should not forget his existence.

We thought at the time there was something rather sad and ironic about all this, because the truth is that Carol has a greater natural aptitude for the publicity business than Mr. Birdwell, Mr. Charlie Michelson and the late Ivy Lee put together. In commenting on this curious transaction we said:

... It is a great pity that he (Carol) should have this monarchical crochets. ... If this were really a logical universe, it would be Mr. Birdwell who would be offering Carol $35,000 to take over the direction of the business. ... In the somewhat improbable event that Mr. Birdwell and Carol should see their great opportunity and come to a partnership, we trust that the Department of State will, in the interest of business, withdraw whatever objection it has to the presence of Carol in these United States.

For our part we could never see that Mr. Birdwell did much to earn the fee that Carol paid him. But now that Carol is, so to speak, working on his own again, things are looking up. Nothing in his somewhat spectacular career has received such a generally favorable press or has so much endeared him to sentimental Americans as his recent marriage at Rio to Mme. Lupescu, thereby putting the climactic touch in the best Hollywood tradition to one of the great Sunday supplement serial romances of the century.

IN THE BISHOP'S GARDEN

The quiet air is filled with the fragrance of flowers; the ancient evergreens, stirred by the drifting breeze, murmur a gentle song of peace.

Above the carpeting of clover the wall is embroidered with lichen, and the kneeling saint in her jasmine-framed panel, seems to listen quietly to the songs of the joyous birds, splashing in the cool waters of the fountain.

Congressional Library

I feel that Jerry Klutz and The Post performed a public service with publication of his article of July 6 concerning the Congressional Library.

If the proposal to destroy material concerning Russia was seriously made, it might seem that an investigation of personnel would be in order. One might as well destroy medical literature relating to tuberculosis or cancer on the grounds that these diseases are malignant and their existence ought not to be made known.

Double Standard

Recently I read that Federal action has been requested against six government agencies for working for the enactment of a national health insurance law. I was somewhat surprised to learn that it is illegal to use Federal money to try to influence legislation.

On May 21, I was called by a member of the Daughters of the Army who asked me if I would accept an invitation from the Secretary of War to go on a two-day plane trip to the compulsory military training unit at Fort Knox. I was told that 16 passenger planes went regularly to Fort Knox from major cities of the country to show the people what a wonderful setup they had at this camp. The trip was to cost me nothing but "about $3 for overnight lodging."

Shortly after I was asked to go, a House subcommittee held a hearing on these methods of propaganda used to sell the idea of UMT to the country, and Assistant Secretary of War Howard C. Peterson admitted that two civilians had been employed by the Army to travel to fly civilians to Fort Knox to see the UMT unit there. Secretary Peterson said, "We make no apology for our efforts to obtain the understanding and support of the public for our program."

Representative Harness, who was chairman of the committee, charged that the War Department had illegally attempted to influence Congress in this matter, but the Justice Department was not asked to proceed against this class of wealth and power. However, action will be brought against small agencies which were attempting to work for the benefit of the civilian, who each day finds the cost of living rising and to whom a major illness spells catastrophe.

Holidays on Saturday

One of your readers in your July 5 issue points out the advantages of having all holidays celebrated on Monday of the week in which they occur.

Of course, this suggestion is so sensible that few readers will seriously consider it, but in a spirit of pure devilishness I have another suggestion.

That is to make all holidays fall on Saturday of the week in which they occur.

Everyone in favor of this hold up his left foot.

Price Competition In Building

The present inability of the building industry to function adequately presents a problem of national emergency proportions. Energetic and immediate steps should be taken to find and apply the correct remedy.

In his article in The Post of July 3, Mr. Livingston emphasizes an anomaly in that industry, that of an immense and unfilled demand at a time when "carpenters and masons are out of work." His reaction is: "the reason seems clear enough: price." But why are prices in the construction business too high? Mr. Livingston suggests several possible reasons: timidity of builders, "slow motion" tactics by labor and defective building codes. These may well prove to be contributing causes of high costs and prices. There is, however, another possibility which should not be lost sight of—namely, the probable elimination of price competition among producers of raw materials for construction, resulting in artificial, high and inelastic prices cooperatively exacted from builders by these producers.

The steel and cement industries have their delivered price systems under which every producer, following the system, who cares to sell in any center of distribution or at any site of construction, anywhere in the United States, quotes the prospective customer, including Federal agencies, identically the same delivered price as all other producers seeking the same business.

The validity under the Federal Trade Commission and Clayton Acts of the delivered price systems in these two industries will be decided respectively by the Circuit Court of Appeals in New York City and by the Supreme Court, presumably in a few months, as the outcome of cases brought by the commission.

There is strong reason to believe that producers of various types of lumber, cast iron soil pipe and asphalt roofing, among other building materials, now also have their delivered price systems and that the result is not merely to cause buyers of building materials to receive price quotations identical from all bidding producers for delivery at each given destination but also to enhance prices made by material producers to retail supply houses and to large construction jobs. There is also more than a theoretical possibility that there are other devices restrictive of price competition in the building trades which may enhance costs to the public.

The tendency of all schemes which abrogate or lesser competition is to create hardship and cause an outcry from the public. There is the danger that the attempted remedy will be a plan of governmental control or some Federal handout or for the substitution of governmental activity for that previously carried on by the industry itself functioning freely.

Such misguided remedies tend directly toward authoritarian government and, if economic and political liberty are to be served, must be avoided by all legitimate means. The first thing is to learn what the facts are in the building industry. Then there presumably will be genuine remedial possibilities.

It may still be possible, before Congress adjourns, by resolution to direct the Federal Trade Commission immediately to investigate and early to report upon the crisis in the construction industry with recommendations as to remedies. A measure merely to ascertain facts should not prove too controversial.

Unity Of Europe

By Barnet Nover

Putting The Pieces Together

BEFORE THE WAR, even as now, Europe was a continent which appeared to be completely divided within itself.

Leaving out European Russia, it contained a population of more than 300 million occupying an area smaller than that of the continental United States. These 300 million people lived in nearly 30 separate sovereignties.

Forward-looking statesmen of the Old World deplored the fact. They saw in that political disunity the root cause of Europe's multiple ills. Some of them, like the late Aristide Briand of France, tried to do something about it. But his plan of a United States of Europe got nowhere. Nor did such unofficial proposals as that of Count Coudenhove-Kalergi for a Pan-European federation fare any better.

IN COMPARISON with Europe's state today, the Europe of prewar days was almost a model of unity, at least in the economic sphere.

Despite a multiplicity of boundaries, tariff barriers, quotas, exchange restrictions and other obstacles to the flow of goods, the European nations did a tremendous amount of business with each other.

In fact, with the exception of Great Britain, whose trade ties were predominantly, though by no means entirely, with overseas countries, European nations did the bulk of their foreign trade with other European countries.

In the case of Germany, the industrial heart of Europe, the figures are very striking.

In 1930, for instance, almost 80 per cent of German exports went to other European countries who supplied the Reich with 56 per cent of her imports. Of course, the percentages varied from year to year. At no time between 1930 and the outbreak of the war nearly a decade later did the percentage of Germany's exports to the rest of Europe fall below 69 per cent. The percentage of her imports from other countries of that continent never fell below 53 per cent.

THIS FLOW of goods was the result of geography, the existence of a superb system of rail and water communications and the trading habits of centuries.

By no means the least destructive result of the war was that it shattered this highly complicated but extraordinarily efficient system of intra-European trade.

It is this circumstance, fully as much as the actual physical destruction which the war visited on Europe, which explains the present parlous plight of many an Old World country. The countries of Europe, all the way from the North Sea and the Atlantic coast to the barbed-wire borders of European Russia, realize this fact. Because they do, because they intensely desire the restoration of that economic unity of prewar days, hampered though it was by innumerable artificial barriers, their response to the Marshall plan has been tremendously enthusiastic.

HOW GREAT a pull the Marshall plan has exerted on the countries of Europe is seen in the action of Czechoslovakia. Czechoslovakia happens to be long in the Russian camp. She belongs there politically. But her economic ties are with Europe as a whole and, to a large measure, with western Europe. Czechoslovakia has made a very gratifying measure of recovery since the end of the war. She still has a long way to go. Last year, for instance, Czechoslovakia's imports amounted in value to 23,240,000,000 crowns, her exports to 14,340,000,000 crowns, leaving a deficit amounting, if translated into American currency, to $160,000,000.

IF RUSSIA is to organize eastern and central Europe into an appendage of the Soviet Union, which seems to be her intention, she needs Czechoslovakia, one of Europe's great workshops. But the scheme is likely to get nowhere unless Czechoslovakia can first strengthen her economy.

Russia cannot help her in this regard. The west can. It is hardly surprising, then, that there have been no protests from Moscow over the action of the Prague government in accepting the Franco-British invitation to participate in the coming Paris talks.

At this writing it is not yet clear whether Czechoslovakia will be the only member of the Soviet bloc to participate. But whether the others stay away or not will make relatively little difference.

Just as it is important to remember that the natural trade ties of nearly all European countries are with other European countries, so the fact must be borne in mind that the bulk of the intra-European trade was by the industrial nations of Europe with each other.

The nations that have agreed to participate in the Paris talks represent a population of almost 250 million and contain within their borders a large percentage of Europe's principal raw materials and much of its available industrial capacity.

If those nations can work out a cooperative program of recovery the benefit to all concerned and to the world at large will be enormous.

Parran Indorses Murray's Health Insurance Measure

By The Associated Press

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, said yesterday it is time to make "at least a start" toward the goal of "adequate medical care for all the people."

He suggested that such a program should be financed through taxation, insurance, or both.

Parran's statement was prepared for a Senate Public Welfare subcommittee which is considering rival bills by Senators Taft (R., Ohio) and Murray (D., Mont.). The surgeon general said the Public Health Service feels the Murray bill's approach is best.

Speedy Decision Urged

The Murray bill would set up a national system of compulsory health insurance to finance medical services for about 85 per cent of the population through a payroll tax. The Taft bill would provide 200 million dollars a year for each of five years to aid the States in setting up medical care programs for low income families.

Dr. Parran said it is up to Congress which approach should be used, but "there should be no undue delay in the full attainment of this goal."

He said there are three "areas" of urgent need:

1. "There is a lack of public health services in many parts of the country and particularly in our rural regions."

2. "There are not enough physicians, dentists, nurses and other health personnel."

3. "There is a substantial part of our population which does not receive adequate medical care."

Other witnesses who indorsed one or the other of the bills in prepared statements included:

FSA Head Testifies

Watson B. Miller, who said "the essential health needs of the Nation are of such scope and character that they can be met with reasonable adequacy only by the development of a broad and comprehensive health program."

He expressed a preference for the Murray bill.

William L. Mitchell, acting commissioner for Social Security, who said the experience of the Social Security Board for 12 years "has vindicated the soundness of the social insurance approach to economic security."

Edward F. Ross, Toledo, speaking for the Fraternal Order of Eagles, who testified that the Taft bill is "a forward stride in solving some of the health problems that challenge solution."

He said it is "practical and sound" and if enacted "will eliminate a major fear in the daily life of the average family."

Truman Signs Omnibus Appropriations Bill

President Truman yesterday signed an omnibus $551,175,932 appropriation bill financing the State, Justice and Commerce departments and the Federal Judiciary for the current fiscal year.

The total is $147,445,501 below Mr. Truman's budget estimates. It is shared this way: State Department, $232,724,703, including curtailed funds for limited operation of the foreign cultural and informational program; Justice Department, $107,488,230; Commerce Department, $191,914,834; Federal Judiciary, $19,048,163.

Lewis Wins Again

NOTHING THAT has happened in a long time has caused so much speculation as John L. Lewis' deal with the big coal operators. As a piece of strategy, it shows Lewis once again in the role of all-powerful manipulator, engineering a bargain affecting the lives of millions of Americans.

The United Mine Workers office solemnly announces that the 200-man policy committee of the union voted unanimously in favor of the terms Lewis had negotiated. From long experience, the boys know what happens to dissidents and they vote as faithfully as in any organization run by a czar at the top.

There was, of course, no reason why any union man in his right mind would have voted against the contract Lewis had negotiated. While its benefits have been exaggerated, it does give UMW members far more than they had even under Government operation.

Perhaps because this is a political town, inevitably speculation turns on the politics behind the Lewis deal. There are those who believe it has important political overtones for 1948 and after.

They link it to a report that is more and more taken to be reliable. That is that Lewis and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York have come to an understanding. Which means that Lewis will do everything he can, privately and publicly, to help bring about Dewey's nomination and election next year. Certain AFL officials are convinced this is true, and they are somewhat nervous at the thought that Lewis means to attach the federation to the Dewey comet in '48.

THIS CAN BE laughed off, of course, as merely a political flying saucer—an emanation of Washington's heat. But when you examine the political consequences of the deal that Lewis engineered with Benjamin F. Fairless of the United States Steel Corp., it does not sound quite so laughable.

No. 1. Lewis becomes the outstanding champion of organized labor. He got more for his men, both in pay and in benefits, than any other leader—and without a strike. That will add immeasurably to the political weight he can pull next year.

No. 2. By circumventing the provisions of the Taft-Hartley law, Lewis has made the authors of that act look rather foolish. Those qualified to know say that under the Lewis contract the penalties against wildcat strikes cannot be enforced against the mine workers. This certainly does not enhance the prestige of Senator Robert A. Taft, who is Dewey's rival for the Republican presidential nomination.

One of the ironies is what happened to the Southern operators. Southern Congressmen went along with the backers of the Taft-Hartley bill, but when Lewis got ready to deal, he kept the Southerners waiting outside his door until he had the terms he wanted from the big boys in the North. The law, as someone once observed, can't make over human behavior in a day.

Coal Agreement

By Mark Sullivan

Public Interest Thwarted Again

SUPERFICIALLY, as a piece of paper, the new coal-wage contract is an ordinary agreement between individuals and groups they represent.

One party to the contract is Mr. John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers. The other party is certain major owners of coal mines. Among these the most important are steel companies which own coal mines, especially the United States Steel Corp.

But the consequences of this contract are not limited to the participants; the effect on them is only a beginning. From them the consequences spread to the entire economy of the country and to every citizen.

Miners will get some $1.75 more per day. Coal will cost some 75 cents more per ton to consumers. (Neither of these figures can be exact—the wage raise varies with different types of work, and the price increase with different types of coal and uses of it.)

That is only the beginning. Everything made in industries which use coal as fuel will cost more to make, hence will cost more to the public. In one industry, steel, the increase is estimated at some $1.50 a ton. This will spread outward and upward into every article made of steel or into which steel enters. Coal is used by railroads as fuel; hence every article carried by railroads as freight will cost more to carry. No need to illustrate further. The process set in motion by this new coal-wage contract is automatic and cumulative, a certain step upward toward a higher price level for goods generally and the country generally.

THE MEN who made this contract could have acted upon their respective private interests solely, or could take into account the public consequences of what they did. The private interest of Mr. Lewis is served fully. He got substantially what he demanded and got it practically without opposition. On the other side the leading representative of mine owners was Mr. Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel. Had he acted in the interest of mine owners solely and simply, his course might have been to resist the demanded wage raise and fight it out. That course, if successful, would have been in the public interest also, for prevention of the wage raise would have averted the effects on the country that are now in sight.

Mr. Fairless, apparently seeing the public interest in a different way, says he acted in that interest. As the contract was made he said he was "hopeful" it would bring "industrial peace in the bituminous coal industry for a long time to come." This should prove to be highly beneficial to the whole economy of the Nation. In my judgment a coal strike at this time would have paralyzed the industry of the entire country and might also have had an adverse effect upon the international situation.

A SOURCE other than Mr. Fairless, but believing that averting a strike was the paramount consideration, gives an additional reason. A strike might have led to another taking over of the mines by the Government, another in a series now considerable. And each taking over is a temporary nationalization of coal. The end might be permanent nationalization.

Mr. Fairless, regardless of his motive or line of reasoning, arrived at a result that has become somberly familiar. He appeased what he feared. But even if the appeasement achieves what he hoped for, a different kind of tragedy can come to America as a result of the course he took.

A chief cause of our boom-bust of the 1920's was the taking of too much of the fruits of industry by labor and owners; failure to give enough to the public, in the form of reduced prices of goods. This is now being repeated in coal. Labor is to get more wages, industry must charge higher prices to pay the wages, the public must pay higher prices for goods. Poor public.

Argentine President Juan Peron's proposal for a hemisphere "declaration of peace" met with a cool reception yesterday from Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour, a former ambassador to Argentina.

NEA Committee Asks Power To Probe Teacher Dismissals

Cincinnati, July 9 (AP).—The committee on tenure and academic freedom said today it would ask the National Education Association for power to investigate fully all dismissals of school teachers.

Miss Helen T. Collins of New Haven, Conn., chairman of the committee, made the announcement.

She said the decision was reached after the committee had set standards for achievement of academic freedom allowing teachers to present facts available on any subject and to express personal opinions so long as the students were encouraged to reach their own conclusions.

Miss Collins also said the Rankin bill which would impose a fine of $10,000 or a jail term of 10 years upon conviction for un-American activities might work a hardship on teachers because it holds it to be unlawful in any course of teaching to advocate, express or convey the impression of sympathy with or approval of communism.

Earlier Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio told the association that "nothing in my opinion could be more dangerous than the direction of education from Washington."

He said in a speech broadcast from Washington to the meeting that the bill he had sponsored for Federal aid for schools prevented any direction by the Federal Government.

"Opposition to the bill is largely based on the fear that if Federal money is advanced, Federal power will grow," Taft said. "I do not think this is necessarily so, but it is a danger we have recognized and tried to protect against in the new bill."

He said he believed a majority of the Senate favored Federal aid for schools.

Representative Edward O. McCowan of Wheelersburg, Ohio, who introduced a similar bill in the House, appeared personally before the legislative commission of the NEA. He said his bill carried full safeguards against Federal interference with State administration of funds.

McCowan said his bill provided a $40 minimum per pupil per year. Wealthy States, he added, would receive $3 per year per pupil, and his bill would bring more than three million dollars to Ohio annually for teachers' salaries.

Under the Taft bill no State would receive less than $5 per pupil.

May and Garssons Ask Acquittal

Former Representative Andrew May and the Garsson brothers asked District Court yesterday to set aside their convictions for bribery, fraud and illegal conspiracy.

Defense counsel for the three men charged that the July 7 conviction was based upon local "prejudice and ill-will" and was not sufficient to sustain the conviction. May and Henry and Murray Garsson, involved in a 70-million-dollar "paper" munitions empire, also asked Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut to arrest the judgment of guilty and to acquit them.

If these moves are unsuccessful, defense attorneys said the case will be appealed to higher courts. The defendants, not yet sentenced, face up to six years in prison.

Truman Urged to Tour U. S. Visit Voters With Eye on '48

By Edward T. Follard
Post Reporter

Political leaders in the Democratic Party are urging President Truman to make an old-fashioned swing around the country so that the voters can get a close-up of him.

News of this mounting pressure came yesterday as Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York continued his "nonpolitical" tour in the Midwest, receiving pledge after pledge of delegates for the Republican presidential nomination. The belief is growing among Democratic chieftains that Governor Dewey will be Mr. Truman's opponent in the 1948 race.

The suggestion that Mr. Truman get out and visit with the voters, however, was made before Dewey started his current tour. The Democratic strategists think it is none too early for Mr. Truman to show himself around the country, even though the '48 election still is a year and four months away.

Wins Over Crowds

They have noted that the President, just by being himself, nearly always wins over the crowds when he gets out among them. So far, however, his most notable triumphs have come in Mexico and Canada, whose citizens won't be able to help him much at the polls next year.

The plan that has been suggested to Mr. Truman by party leaders is that he start out with a Labor Day speech in Chicago. They would then have him board his special railroad car, the Ferdinand Magellan, and head westward, making rear-platform talks in a tour that would embrace the North Central, Northwest, Far West and Southwest sections of the country.

So far Mr. Truman has not committed himself to any such tour.

Yesterday Myron G. Blalock, Democratic national committeeman for Texas, told the President yesterday that the voters of the Lone Star State would like to see him and hear him talk. He, therefore, urged him to board his special train and head down that way.

Democratic leaders from Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kentucky and Tennessee spoke up and said that the people in their States felt the same way. Mr. Truman thanked Blalock but made no promises.

Party Leaders at White House

The occasion was another meeting of State Democratic leaders at the White House, the eighth in a series. Forty-one States have now sent their national committeemen and State chairmen here to develop ideas and whip up enthusiasm for the '48 campaign. Next on the schedule are those from the far western States.

The Texas delegation yesterday left a check for $50,000 at Democratic headquarters in the Mayflower, and the Oklahoma delegation one for $25,000. The money was raised at Jefferson Day dinners and will go into the party's war chest.

At the White House, John F. Odom, Louisiana State chairman, told the President that he could get up right then and "cast 22 votes for Harry S. Truman" for the Democratic nomination.

Keen Johnson, Undersecretary of Labor and national committeeman for Kentucky, said his State "made a mistake" four years ago in electing a Republican governor. He said that he expects Kentucky to elect a Democratic governor next November and then go on to vote for a Democratic President in '48.

It's been in your Pocket

You've dropped it in the collection plate on Sunday.

You've used it to pay the butcher, the grocer, the tax-collector.

You've used it to swell your savings account, to educate your children, to build your home.

For it's one of the millions of dollars the Southern Railway System spends in the South every year... dollars that find their way to you through your banks, your stores, your business, your job.

Over half of all the dollars we take in begin their journey to you in the pay envelopes of our 50,000 employees. Others go direct to the South's industries and farmers to buy the materials and supplies we use. Some become tax money, helping to foot the bills for schools, highways, airports, fire departments and other governmental services.

In many ways over and above providing an efficient, dependable, economical, privately-owned transportation service, the Southern helps to prime the South's economic pump—and thus puts dollars in your pocket.

Dewey Heads For GOP Talks In Kansas City

En route to Kansas City with Governor Dewey, July 9 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, today ended three days of private political conferences in Sapulpa, Okla., and headed for Kansas City to meet more top Republicans in his official pursuit of the GOP presidential nomination.

There, awaiting the New Yorker's arrival, Kansas Republican National Committeeman Harry Darby said Dewey was "even more popular today than at any previous time," but added that "it will not be known how the Kansas delegation will vote until the delegates are chosen."

The Kansas delegation voted for Dewey in 1940 and 1944. "No one man or group tells Kansas what to do—our Republicans make their own decisions," Darby added.

Almost from the moment of his arrival in Sapulpa until his departure this afternoon, the New York governor stuck to his hotel suite conferring with Republican leaders of Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas.

All were understood to have told him current sentiment indicated a majority of the delegates from their States would vote for him at the national convention in Philadelphia next June.

Dewey continues to maintain that his four-week, 4000-mile swing through the West is a nonpolitical trip to attend the Governors' conference at Salt Lake City and give himself and his wife and two sons a sight-seeing vacation.

The Dewey party will be in Kansas City for 27 hours before entraining late tomorrow night for Denver and Salt Lake City.

The governor is expected to devote much of that time to huddles with Republican leaders of the Middle West.

W. Va. Votes Reported Sold For $2, Liquor

By The Associated Press
Votes in the disputed 1946 West Virginia senatorial election were bought "for $2 and up and for whisky," Jack W. Hardy, staff investigator for a Senate Election Subcommittee, said yesterday.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Jenner (R., Ind.) recommended "a complete investigation" of alleged fraud in 12 West Virginia counties.

Hardy later told a reporter: "Precinct workers estimate that in some precincts of Kanawha County (where a spot check has been conducted by six Senate investigators and two administrative assistants) purchase of votes for money or whisky, or both, ran as high as 95 per cent."

Kilgore Seat Contested
Thomas Sweeney, defeated Republican candidate, is contesting the election of Senator Kilgore, a Democrat, now serving his second term, charging fraud and irregularities.

Kilgore won the election by a margin of 3534 votes out of a total of more than 500,000 cast. Sweeney alleged fraud in 12 counties which cast 40 per cent of the ballots.

Jenner told reporters the subcommittee made its recommendation to the Rules Committee by two to one yesterday. The Rules Committee has authority to order the investigation.

Hardy said the 12 counties are: Raleigh and Kanawha, in which a spot check now is continuing, and Boone, Cabell, Fayette, Logan, Mercer, Morgan, Monroe, McDowell, Wayne and Wyoming.

Charges Involve Both Sides
Hardy said other evidence of alleged fraud found were "persons not duly qualified and registered in the precinct in which they voted, and improper addresses."

"Purchasing of votes," said Hardy, "apparently was indulged in by both Republicans and Democrats. Apparently the Democrats had more funds available for such purchases."

He said "$2 and up or a bottle of whisky was the usual price; sometimes cash and whisky."

What To Do
For That Sluggish,
Down-and-Out
Feeling

Remember the time when you could eat like a horse, bubbled-over with energy, felt happy as a lark? Was it not because you liked to eat—didn't know what digestion was, felt strong as an ox? As age advances the blood, the life and the ever-changing blood, need help. Now you may again release vibrant energy to every muscle, flow, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get red blood cells you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have proven the fact shown that 588 Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the 588 Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, 588 Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice which is non-organic only the little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get heavy with gas, bloated and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Recharge your body with rich, red-blood, stock on 588 Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should come. You eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, sleep better, have a healthy color glow to your skin—firm flesh all out better. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store, 588 Tonic helps build security health.

Carol, Magda Must File Divorce Data

Rio de Janeiro, July 9 (AP).—A Brazilian district court ruled today that the divorces of former Romanian King Carol and of Magda Lupescu, his mistress of many years, must be duly registered with the federal supreme court before their emergency marriage a week ago becomes binding.

After taking the testimony of the six persons who witnessed the marriage last Thursday while Magda lay gravely ill, Judge Chermont de Miranda said the marriage act signed at that time was not binding. He explained that an affidavit presented by the Swedish legation affirming that Carol and Magda were divorced was not sufficient.

Judge De Miranda directed the participants to present the marriage act again for legalization, after Carol's divorce decree by a Bucharest court and Magda's own divorce had been properly registered with the supreme court.

Final Action Due Today on Bill for White House 'Heir'

By The Associated Press

A bill that would make House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Massachusetts Republican, the next in line for the Presidency may be up for final passage today.

House Republican leaders had announced their hope of sending the bill to President Truman last night, but action was blocked because the formal printed report of the House Judiciary Committee on it was not ready.

The Senate has passed the bill and the President twice has requested its approval. It would designate the Speaker as heir apparent to the White House post in event of a vacancy in the Presidency and Vice Presidency.

Bond Is $5000 Film Actress Arraigned on Attack Count

MADGE MEREDITH

Los Angeles, July 9 (AP).—Actress Madge Meredith, 26, arraigned on charges of kidnapping, robbery and assault with a deadly weapon upon her former manager, Nicholas Giannacis, 38, was at liberty under $5000 bond today pending a preliminary hearing next Friday.

William Klinsenberg, 32, a cook; Albert W. Tucker, 29, nurseman; and James Hatfield, former policeman, also face a hearing that day. Giannacis and his bodyguard, Verne Davis, alleged that at the actress' instigation, the trio attacked them June 30 as an outgrowth of litigation between Meredith and Giannacis.

Miss Meredith has denied the allegation. Giannacis claims he helped get her roles in pictures.

Trial of Eisler Postponed

The passport fraud trial of Gerhart Eisler, reputedly the No. 1 Communist agent in the United States, was continued in District Court yesterday until 9:30 a. m. Monday.

Justice James W. Morris granted the continuance after an hour-long conference with Eisler's three attorneys, Abraham J. Isserman, David Rein and Mrs. Carol King, and United States Attorney William Hitz, representing the Government.

The defense attorneys sought the delay on the grounds they had had insufficient time in which to prepare their case.

The courtroom was filled with prospective jurors and witnesses when the stocky, 50-year-old German-born Eisler arrived with his attorneys to stand trial on the Government's charges he lied in getting a visa to Mexico in 1945.

A Public Statement by International Harvester Company Prompted by Recent Labor Legislation

Quake in Argentina

Buenos Aires, July 9 (AP).—An earthquake was felt in Tucuman, northwestern Argentina, today while Presidents Juan D. Peron of Argentina and Gabriel Gonzalez Videla of Chile were in the city. Two intense shocks were felt. No

NEWSPAPERS and radio in recent weeks have been full of statements—many of them heated and controversial—about the new Taft-Hartley labor law.

International Harvester Company did not enter into the arguments, either for or against the bill. This was because of a long-standing policy of taking no part in controversial legislative matters.

Now that it is the law of the land, however, we feel that it is proper for us to make a short and simple statement to all our employees—their families—and to the public—of what our policy will be under this Act.

We wish to make such a statement, even though at this time we do not know fully, nor will we know for some time, all the legal requirements which the Act will impose upon us or upon labor unions. Nor do we know as yet the official interpretations that will have to be made on many sections of the act before they will become generally and clearly understood.

But there are several general statements we can make now:

- FIRST, the passage of this law will mean no change in the fundamental, basic International Harvester policy and attitude on employee relations.
- SECOND, we see nothing in the Act now which disturbs or changes in any way the present arrangements between International Harvester and its employees on such matters as wages, overtime pay, seniority, pay for holidays, vacations, or incentive systems. The Act will require some changes in future contractual arrangements with unions, but not on these matters.
- THIRD, we will, of course, live up to the mandatory provisions of the new law, wherever they apply to International Harvester employee relations.

While specific sections of the law will require some changes in our future contracts with unions, we have no intention of adopting any anti-union policy following passage of this Act. We will not use it in any effort to destroy unions, to weaken them, or to discredit them.

Rather, we intend to continue to follow our established policy of doing everything we can to improve our labor-management relations, to build stronger mutual confidence, and to promote more harmonious relations.

We see nothing in this Act which is intended to abolish collective bargaining or undermine it.

Therefore, we wish everyone to know that our goal will be to operate under this Act in such a way as to maintain all the satisfactory relationships that have been developed over the years through collective bargaining.

The National Labor Relations Board, which will handle the administration of the Act, has pledged itself publicly to give "the fairest and most efficient administration that lies within its powers". Our Company will cooperate with the Board toward that objective.

We will not attempt to break down or destroy what we have built up over the years, but rather to improve our whole program of human relations within the Company.

In accomplishing this, we know we will have the cooperation of all Harvester people.

D. C. Police Probe Voted was approved a few hours later by the executive board.

It declared there "is evidence of widespread acts of omission in the Metropolitan police" because of "withholding from the official records complaints of felonies."

The withholding of these complaints "has operated to the detriment of the general public and warrants a persistent and intensive investigation to ferret out the heads of the practice and eliminate the source."

Questions Submitted

The federation asked that the grand jury and congressional committees determine:

1. How long has this practice persisted?

2. Who is responsible for the practice?

3. Who is responsible for having continued it?

4. How many cases have been pocketed in every category of felonies, including robberies?

5. Why were offenses pocketed?

Informal of the Senate committee's resolution, Chairman Ableman declared:

"This action in recommending an investigation is a welcome response to the Federation of Citizens Association. While the proposed investigation encompasses all law enforcement activities, it nevertheless is a direct recognition of the deficiencies in the Metropolitan Police Department which has been exposed by The Washington Post."

"The Federation of Citizens Association has for some time proposed a drastic reorganization of law enforcement bodies in the District in the interests of efficiency. The fact that the Senate District Committee recognizes this need is gratifying."

"The Commissioners of the District, and particularly the Metropolitan Police Department, should welcome the proposed investigation as a means of clarifying a distasteful situation."

"If the implications in The Post's studies and that of the Federation's Committee on Police and Fire Protection are substantiated, then Congress should waste no further time in establishing in Washington a government responsive to the people."

Ball Proposes Probe

As gathered from various sources, the committee action began when Senator McGrath proposed approval of his bill which seeks to have the President appoint a police chief with the consent of the Senate.

Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) then asked what the Senators wanted to do about The Post's expose. Senator Ball proposed an immediate investigation of the Metropolitan Police—and that opened the gates.

It was reliably reported that at least one Senator complained of police inaction in finding property stolen from his automobile. Others made similar complaints.

Senator McGrath's bill was sidetracked when the resolution was voted with a loud "aye." No dissent was reported. There were eight members of the committee present, more than the necessary majority.

German Court Sentences Stark, Nobel Winner

Munich, July 9 (AP).—Dr. Johannes Stark, 73-year-old Nobel prize winner and German atomic scientist, was sentenced to four years at hard labor by the German denazification court in Bavaria today.

Stark, who won the Nobel prize in 1919 for work in physics, was found guilty as a "major Nazi offender." The prosecution charged that Stark entered the Nazi party in 1930, did atomic research for the Nazis, was the writer of anti-Semitic books and was a close friend of Hitler.

Philip to Wed Distant Cousin Of Both Washington and Lee

Young Mountbatten Fits Story-Book Idea of a Prince

London, July 9 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth chose for her husband a man whom untold thousands would marry if they had the chance.

Lieut. Philip Mountbatten is a man's man, and a bobby-soxer's ideal as well.

He is tall, fair-haired, blue-eyed and has the profile of a classic Greek statue. Slightly reserved, he smiles easily and says the right things to women. In naval uniform, he looks like something out of a tailor's ad.

Mountbatten has the broad shoulders that helped him become an outstanding soccer player at school. He dances perfectly and often. He drives a car as fast as the law allows.

Complicated Ancestry

Social position? Besides his ties with Queen Victoria, he was until he renounced his title last March, a prince of Greece and Denmark, sixth in line for the Greek throne.

He has little money of his own, but his uncle, Viscount Mountbatten, has wads, and Elizabeth will have plenty.

Born in Corfu June 10, 1921, Philip has as complicated an ancestry as any European royal personage.

His father, Prince Andrew of Greece, was a younger son of Prince William of Denmark, who accepted the Greek throne as George I in 1863.

Philip's mother, Princess Alice, was the eldest daughter of Prince Louis of Battenberg, a German who acquired British citizenship in 1868 and was first sea lord at the outbreak of World War I. He changed his name to the less German Mountbatten in 1917.

Thus young Philip, taken into exile at Paris with his family at the age of one, has no Greek blood in his veins. Then he moved to England.

Made Football Team

At Dartmouth Naval College, which he entered in 1939, he made the first football eleven and won the King's dirk as the outstanding cadet of his year.

During the war he served as a midshipman on various cruisers and battleships. He was second in command on the destroyer Wallace during the Sicily landings.

A Prince Consort, by well-established constitutional tradition, should be seen but not heard—in anything affecting the government of the British empire. Queen Victoria's husband Albert broke the rule and got into trouble. Philip is unlikely to repeat the mistake.

Gets Along With Men

He is, however, no stranger to statecraft. "Uncle Dickie," as he calls Lord Mountbatten, taught him much.

Lecturing on current affairs to enlisted men of the royal navy was his chief assignment after World War II. For all the men's traditional suspicion of "toil" of

Princess Elizabeth Is Direct Descendant Of Colonial American

By Cyril F. J. Hankinson

Editor, Debutts Ferry, Bournemouth, Dorsetshire and Dorsetshire

London, July 9 (AP).—The marriage of Princess Elizabeth and Philip Mountbatten, whose engagement was announced today, will join one of the ancient families of Denmark and a British royal princess whose forebears go back to America.

Princess Elizabeth is the first British princess of American descent. Through her mother she comes from one of the early settlers in Virginia. Genealogical tables show that she is one of the nearest living kin of George Washington, and Robert E. Lee's name is in her family tree.

In the seventeenth century, one Robert Porteus left Newbattle, near Edinburgh, Scotland, and settled on the York River, near Portpatrick Creek. He called the place Newbattle (sometimes spelled Newbottle) Settlement.

In 1720, Robert Porteus, who had served as a legislator in Virginia, left America and returned to York, England, to insure adequate education for his children. Robert died, and was buried in Ripon Cathedral.

Now comes the direct link with royalty. Robert Porteus' great-granddaughter, Frances Dora Smith, married the thirteenth Earl of Strathmore in 1855, and became the future grandmother of the Queen, who was Lady Elizabeth Boweslyon, daughter of the fourteenth Earl of Strathmore, before her marriage.

The other American wife, Mildred Smith, of Furton, Gloucester County, Va., was a first cousin of George Washington's father. Thus, with Franklin D. Roosevelt, Princess Elizabeth, they listened to him intently and liked him. Also, they said, he wasn't afraid to get his hands dirty.

One story about Philip's "common touch" is told by a newspaperman who attended a society wedding. Looking around for someone to carry a message, he beckoned to a blond youngster who cheerfully ran his errand. The reporter didn't know until later that his messenger was Prince Philip.

Philip to Wed Elizabeth and where he joined the Royal Navy in keeping with the Mountbatten tradition. Friends said he expected to remain in the navy after his marriage.

The son of Prince Andrew of Greece and also a member of the Danish royal family, Philip was reared virtually as a son by Lord Mountbatten.

Philip is a member of the Greek Orthodox Church. However, there has been speculation about the likelihood of his admission to the Church of England, which he attended while at school and later at Dartmouth, the British navy's equivalent to Annapolis. Previously members of the Greek Church have been taken into full communions with the Church of England.

Presumably Princess Elizabeth and her consort would set up establishments in London and in the country.

Adjustments are virtually certain to be made in the princess' income, which is now £25,000 ($100,000) per year. It is believed in authoritative circles that upon her marriage this will be increased to about £60,000 ($240,000).

Elizabeth claims kinship with the first United States President (Washington and Roosevelt had common ancestry with the Princess from Kings of England, Washington being descended from Edward I, who died in 1307, and Roosevelt from Henry II, who died in 1189.)

Other ancestors were Col. George Reade of Yorktown, a colonial Governor of Virginia, and Col. Augustine Warner, born in 1643, a member of the Council of Virginia, who lived in York and Gloucester Counties, Va., and through whom the princess is related to yet another famous American, Gen. Robert E. Lee.

49-Year-Old Actress Found Slain in New York Apartment

New York, July 9 (AP).—Blonde actress was found beaten and strangled today in her modernistic midtown apartment, her unclothed body sprawled between twin beds, and police immediately began scanning the list of her men friends in the hunt for the slayer. Police said the 49-year-old woman worked for First National Pictures in 1937 "under the name of Bess True."

She rented the apartment at 333 West 57th st. as Mrs. Sheila Manning, and neighbors believed she was a radio actress.

The body, with a blood-stained towel in the mouth and a sheet knotted about the throat, was found this morning by the woman's maid, but police said they had established she was slain yesterday afternoon.

A partly-smoked cigar, regarded as "a valuable clue," was found in the apartment.

Airlines Set $1700 Price On Round-World Ticket

Chicago, July 9 (AP).—United Airlines and Pan American Airways joined today to provide round-the-world air service for $1700 from 43 United States cities served by United.

Present schedules call for United's planes to connect with Pan American for an eastbound departure from New York every Friday and a westbound departure from California each Thursday.

India Delegate Is Rebuked by U. N. Official

Jerusalem, Palestine, July 9 (AP).—The chairman of the United Nations' Special Commission on Palestine became so annoyed today at the way the Indian delegate cross-examined Rabbi Yehuda Leib Fishman, the Jewish Agency's last witness, that he apologized to the rabbi and excused him.

Chairman Emil Sahdstrom objected to the persistent questions by Sir Abdur Rahman, the Indian delegate, about religious issues. Rabbi Fishman traced several thousand years of Jewish-Arab relations in Palestine for Rahman. The cross-examination reached its climax when Rahman asked how many Jews of the Christian religion were in Palestine.

Rabbi Fishman said it was difficult to identify Christian Jews asked excitedly because "we regard Jews as Jews regardless of their conversion."

"Then you regard all Christians and Moslems as Jews?" Rahman asked.

CHICAGO, July 9.—It is assumed that President Ford Frick walked into the dressing room of his beaten National League yesterday and did the polite thing by saying, "You put up a nice fight, boys," but actually he couldn't be very proud of the direction his team got.

Of all the beatings Frick's National League have taken (10) in the 14 years of all-star games, the 2-to-1 defeat of yesterday must have been the most painful. The National League not only was beaten, they were outmaneuvered.

Eddie Dyer, who managed the Cardinals to victory over the Red Sox in the last World Series, was something less than a genius in his most recent tilt with Joe Cronin, manager of the American League. If Dyer got the fish-eye from President Frick after the game, it is understandable.

Dyer had orders from Frick to get tough and stay tough against the American League, and not to substitute players for sentiment's sake; to keep his starting lineup in the game if that was his best team.

POVICH
DYER DIDN'T DO THAT. Perhaps he was too cocky about the 1-0 lead Johnny Mize's homer had given his club in the fourth inning. Anyway, at the start of the fifth he withdrew his top hitter, the .335-batting Harry Walker, and substituted Andy Pafko, a .282 hitter. A bit later he replaced his best catcher, Walker Cooper (.316), with Bruce Edwards (.273) of the Dodgers.

All told, the National League substituted as if they had a six-run lead, and at the finish had sent 23 players into the game. When it came down to the real rub, in the last three innings after Stan Spence's pinch hit moved Cronin's club a run in front, Dyer was in horrible shape for guys who could hit.

In the seventh inning, Dyer was without hitting replacements for Pee-wee Reese and Ed Stanky, who don't have any pitcher. In the eighth, the best pinch hitter he could dig up was Phil Cavaretta, what with Walker Cooper already out of the game. In the ninth it was a sad story.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE tried to get the tying run back in the ninth with Whitey Kurowski, Pee-wee Reese and Ed Stanky available as hitters. Two of them grounded out, and Reese walked. In the final showdown, with the tying run on first base, Dyer was left with only Schoolboy Rowe as a pinch hitter. Cronin must have smirked. Rowe is a good hitter, but only as pitchers go, not as hitters go. Senselessly, in the third inning, Dyer had used Bert Hass, a .320 hitter, to pinch hit. Now in the ninth, Rowe could only fly out and the game was over.

For Manager Joe Cronin it was a sort of revenge, sweet to feel. Cronin had placed himself squarely on the spot an inning before when he removed Walter Masterson after Masterson struck out the last hitter and allowed no hits in his one and two thirds innings of pitching. He brought in southpaw Joe Page to pitch to Johnny Mize, and it was embarrassing to Cronin when Mize singled.

At a point when Cronin might have been the goat of the ball game, Lou Boudreau saved the situation with a smart play on Enos Slaughter's grounder to retire the side, and Cronin's strategy had worked. Another National League hit in that spot, and Cronin would have been a bum, in diamonds.

FOR TED WILLIAMS, it was a nice day, and must have assuaged some of the pain of the last World Series in which he hit a mere 200 and batted average only one run in seven games. He made two of the A. L.'s eight hits, and his single to right in the sixth made possible the tying run.

Both of Williams' hits were against Harry (The Cat) Brecheen, who had won three games for the Cardinals in the 1946 series. There was something cocky, anyway, about Dyer's attitude toward Williams yesterday. He scorned the right-field defensive shift that had stopped Williams in the series. Williams pulled both of his hits into right field.

It was a nice day, too, for Stan Spence, whose seventh-inning pinch hit broke up the game. After Johnny Sain threw him curve balls for two quick strikes, Spence connected. Asked after the game what kind of a pitch he hit, Spence said, "It didn't curve a bit until it was half way out to center field."

Remember First All-Star Tilt? Babe Ruth, Johnson Pitched

By Whitney Martin

New York, July 9 (AP).—The fourteenth Major League All-Star game played yesterday was the fifteenth, if you want to be really technical about it.

The overlooked contest wasn't an inter-league affair as the others have been, as it matched an American League All-Star club against one of the league's teams, but the game saw more real immortals of the diamond in action than any game since. Or any two or three games, for that matter.

It was played in Boston in 1916, and we first learned of it at last year's All-Star game at Fenway Park. It matched the Red Sox against a team chosen from the other league clubs in a benefit contest for the family of Tim Murnane, a baseball writer.

If you have doubts as to the class of that All-Star team, here is the line-up: Outfield—Toby Cobb, Tris Speaker, Joe Jackson; infield—Stuffy McInnis, Ray Chapman, Rabbit Maravilla, Buck Weaver; catcher—Steve O'Neill; pitcher—Walter Johnson.

That outfield alone would stand comparison with any outfield you can name. And just to bring in another celebrity, the umpire was John L. Sullivan, the Boston strong boy.

Oh, yes. The Red Sox won the game, 2 to 0, the whitewash being slapped on by a sturdy, moon-faced kid named Babe Ruth.

A news item concerning the added trials and tribulations of Hank Greenberg notes the fact the Pirate slugger's arm ailment has been diagnosed as "loose bodies in the right elbow."

Those flying discs really get around, don't they?

Early Wynn Slated to Twirl Today
In One of Two Games; Bluege Miffed

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Chicago, July 9.—The luck of the Nats, none too good sayway, would not seem to be improving at this point. At a time when they are eager to get rid of a painful six-game losing streak, they find themselves in Chicago, of all places.

The Nats do not go good in Chicago, as they say goes among the monosyllabic folks. In fact, their association with the Chicago club this season has been to their sorrow no matter the locale. The White Sox have licked them 10 times in 11 games.

Once, you may remember, the Nats did beat the White Sox. That was on the last trip out here when they got shut-out pitching—for 18 innings—and thumped out a 1-0 victory in a great slugging display.

Early Wynn to Pitch

Well, tomorrow, the Nats have two cracks at it. They're either going to end their losing streak or extend it to eight straight, because they're meeting the Chicago characters in a double-header.

Early Wynn is going to try to win one game. He is the solid sort who was named to the All-Star team, but saw no action yesterday. He's won nine and lost six, an excellent record considering the company he's in.

The other game is a little bit notable before it starts. Ray Scarborough will pitch for Washington. It marks the promotion of Scarborough to a starting role after several weeks in the bullpen, where he has been a pretty good pitcher.

The Nats are pleased neither with their recent play nor themselves. There has been grumbling among certain of the players who are being benched against different types of pitching, although it doesn't come close to any mutiny or rebellion, as some reports have had it.

Ferrell Ruled Out

Manager Ossie Bluege will call a meeting before tomorrow's game and is expected to read something of a riot act to the whole squad. Bluege is a bit irked over one report that Rick Ferrell will replace him as manager.

If Bluege is replaced at the end of the season, it won't be by Ferrell, and he won't be replaced at all if the Nats do a respectable job from here in.

The Nats' infield has been pretty horrible in recent games. Bluege now recognizes the fact that it's not a steady infield unless Mark Clark is in at shortstop. Cecil Travis, hitting better, does not cover the required ground at shortstop.

Gerry Friddy now almost rid of his lame ankle, will replace Sherry Robertson at second base.

If George Case is available, Bluege will play him in left field against all kinds of pitching, replacing both Joe Grace and Tom McBride. Clark Griffith, here for the All-Star game during the past two days, was not concerned over the Nats' slump to the point of even talking with Bluege.

District Lad Upset Victim In Junior Play

Brooklyn, July 9 (AP).—Top-seeded Buddy Behrens of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., led the way into the quarterfinals of the Eastern Junior Tennis Tournament today by crushing Lawrence Laiks of Brooklyn, 6-0, 6-0.

Sidney Schwartz of Brooklyn, seeded second, narrowly missed elimination by Richard Squires of Scarsdale, N. Y., however, when he dropped the first set and was trailing, 5-2, in the second before he rallied to win 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

The only upset of today's fourth-round matches saw fifth-seeded Garry Thomas of Washington ousted by Gerald Monsalvatge of Coral Gables, Fla., 7-5, 4-6, 8-6. Stuart Robinson of New York, seeded fourth, reached the round of eight with a 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 triumph over Thomas Lewyn of Scarsdale.

Red Sox Acquire Infielder in Deal

Boston, July 9 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox today called up Third Baseman Sam Dente from Louisville and announced the release on option of pitcher Mel Parnell to the same farm club.

Red Sox headquarters said the 25-year-old Dente would report tomorrow in Detroit with the chance of seeing action immediately. Dente, whose home is in Kearny, N. J., has been hitting .311 for Louisville.

Parnell, a left-hander, had a record of two victories and three defeats with the Red Sox this season.

Parker Advances The Easy Way

Spring Lake, N. J., July 9 (AP).—Top-seeded Frankie Parker of Los Angeles, No. 3 ranking player nationally, arrived at the tenth annual State Bathing and Tennis Club invitation tennis tournament today and quickly advanced to the quarter-final round.

After gaining a default victory over Dan Gallagher of Princeton, he enjoyed an easy workout in whipping Bruce Johnson of Spring Lake, 6-4, 6-1.

He joined second-seeded Gardner Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., and third-ranked Billy Talbot of Wilmington, Del., in the round of eight. Mulloy downed Irvin Dorfman of Yale University, 6-3, Talbot outclassed Don Hamilton of South Orange, 6-1, 6-0.

Tokyo, July 9 (AP).—A group of influential Japanese sportsmen and politicians today launched the Olympic Promotion Association, designed to enlist wide support for early Japanese participation in the games.

District Tennis Champions Collect Their Prizes

Bratton Signs To Box 'Biff' Here Aug. 4

Johnny (Honeyboy) Bratton, Chicago's ball-of-fire Negro lightweight who is being boomed as the next 135-pound monarch, has been signed to meet Herbie (Biff) Jones, the slugging southpaw from Southeast, at Griffith Stadium August 4.

The match, long in the making, was concluded yesterday by the Turner's Arena boxing associates with Matchmaker Gabe Menendez putting the finishing touches on the negotiations by guaranteeing Bratton 30 per cent of the proceeds.

Tired of thumping the assortment of rinky-dink thrown his way, Jones demanded that local promoters bring in someone with a reputation. In Bratton they got the man for Jones.

The 20-year-old Chicagoan is one of the biggest draws in the Midwest. Bratton drew gates of more than $70,000 in his last three fights, which included victories over Danny Kaplow and losses to Gene Burton and Sammy Angott.

Burton ended a string of 10 straight triumphs for the Midway mauler and Angott came along next to put the brakes on Bratton again. Before these two reversals, however, Bratton had catapulted into national prominence with decisions over Willie Jones (twice), Freddie Dawson, Cleo Shans, Kaplow, Morris Reid and Ike Williams, the NBA 135-pound ruler, in a non-title go. Williams had beaten him previously in New Orleans.

While all this was going on, Jones was coasting along, powdering Pedro Firo, whom Bratton flattened in one, Jimmy McAllister and Billy Reed, Jones' latest triumph was a two-round quickie over Lew Hanbury here.

Marlboro Track Again Rebuffed In Bid for Meeting

Baltimore, July 9 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission refused today to reconsider its revocation of racing dates for the Marlboro race track this fall.

Stuart S. Janney, Jr., chairman, said after a meeting, "We discussed the Marlboro question again, but we did not change our decision."

"We would like to see racing this fall at Marlboro, but in fairness to the public and horsemen, we cannot allow a meeting there under present conditions. Nothing is right at Marlboro except the racing strip itself."

The commission revoked dates for the 10-day meeting scheduled to start September 13, because of "inadequate facilities."

John W. Farrell, secretary-treasurer of the track, said earlier crews were at work repairing the stables and "we have ample time to complete repairs in the two months before the track is to open."

'Discs' Finally Hit Sports Page

Waterloo, Iowa, July 9 (AP).—Five thousand "flying discs" fell on Waterloo this afternoon but there was no mystery about the bombardment.

The "discs" were 9-inch paper plates and on each plate these words were printed: "The white Hawks return home Friday night."

The white hawks are Waterloo's team in the Three-1 Baseball League who Friday will play Danville, current league leader.

Among the plates were 30 passes to Friday's game.

Baseball Up in Arms Over Happy's Curb of Corum

New York, July 9 (AP).—Baseball lined up almost solidly today against its own commissioner, following the All-Star game "broadcast incident," and sentiment seemed agreed that major repercussions are certain to ensue.

These, it appeared, are likely to bring about an early attempt to reduce Commissioner A. B. Chandler's control of annual league competitions; so that yesterday's peremptory ruling off the air of Broadcaster Bill Corum won't be repeated in baseball's next.

The proposed wing-clipping of Chandler is said to be in order for the joint meeting preceding the World Series, due in October. And this time club executives say they mean business.

The Corum incident was freely condemned as a form of dictatorship. The commentator apparently had his name arbitrarily stricken from the All-Star broadcast program because he wrote critically in his daily column of the commissioner's conduct of the Leo Durocher case.

A Sound Investment Movie-Maker Wants Cards In Spite of Breardon's 'No!'

Los Angeles, July 9 (AP).—Millionaire Jack Wrather revealed today that he would try to buy the St. Louis Cardinals and was not discouraged by owner Sam Breadon's reply that his world champion baseball club wasn't for sale "at any price."

If he bought the club, he would attempt to transfer the Cardinals to Los Angeles, Wrather said.

The 29-year-old Wrather said his attorney, Col. A. A. Garrett, Dallas, Tex., was investigating the worth of the National League club and its farm system and that an offer would be made, probably within a week.

Might Be Tempted

Associates of the film producer and Texas oilman believed that Breadon's answer was a natural one, but they didn't believe he would turn down any attractive offer.

Breadon, a shrewd baseball trader, has frequently expressed a reluctance to sell his Cardinals at any price, but at other times he apparently has been in a mood to peddle the club.

Wrather intimated that he would not pay the four-million-dollar price which Breadon reportedly had placed on the St. Louis team.

Other Experience

Wrather, husband of film actress Bonita Granville, has had no experience in sports, but has been successful in the eastern Texas oil business as well as in producing films. Buying the Cards would be a "sound investment" for some of his millions, Wrather's associates said.

Even if he can persuade Breadon to sell at his price, Wrather would have to get the approval of the other seven National League clubs to the purchase and would have to get the other 15 major league clubs to approve moving the Cardinals to Los Angeles.

Zone 2 Legion Series Friday

Winchester, Va., July 9.—Alexandria Post 24 and Harrisonburg Post 27, eighth and seventh district champions open a three-game series for Virginia's Zone 2 American Legion baseball title Friday at Harrisonburg.

The second game will be played at Alexandria Tuesday, and if a third game is necessary, it will also take place at Alexandria, next Wednesday.

Alexandria won the eighth district championship last week by defeating Goochland in two out of three games. The winner of the Zone 2 crown will participate in a Shaughnessy playoff with the champions of the three other zone winners for the state trophy.

Los Angeles Nurses Olympics Hopes

Los Angeles, July 9 (AP).—Paul H. Helms, Southern California Olympic committee chairman, said today Los Angeles still has a chance to get the 1952 games if Russia "attempts to exert political influence in Finland."

The International Olympic committee would be likely to revoke its decision to stage the 1952 games in Helsinki in that case, he said. He added that if the site were changed, an American city would be considered favorably and Los Angeles would be a leading candidate.

Kenwood's Mrs. Kreuzburg Advances to Golf Semifinals

She Upsets Favored Mrs. Stokes

By Herb Heft

Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg, playing steady golf over her home course, assumed the role of "spoiler" yesterday as she eliminated the favored Mrs. Walter R. Stokes of Manor, 2 up, in the quarter-finals of the twenty-sixth Maryland State Women's Championship at Kenwood Country Club.

By upsetting the hard-hitting Mrs. Stokes, Mrs. Kreuzburg knocked her out of a chance to become the second woman to annex all three major area tournaments during a one-year period. Mrs. Stokes had already won the District and Middle Atlantic titles this season.

Mrs. Kreuzburg now remains as the lone District area survivor in the semifinals of the Maryland tourney. Mrs. Florence Godfrey of Congressional and Mrs. Marie Walper of Prince Georges both having been eliminated yesterday.

Mrs. Godfrey Bows
Finding the six over par 79 play of Mrs. Marie Louise Bell of Baltimore Country Club too much to cope with, Mrs. Godfrey bowed out, 1 up. Mrs. Walper was the 3-and-1 victim of Mrs. T. E. Schludberg, also of Baltimore Country Club.

Mrs. Maurice Glick of Woodholme, defending champion, brought the number of semifinals from Baltimore to three as she trimmed Mrs. C. E. Richards of the Country Club of Maryland, 5 and 4.

Kenwood champion, Mrs. Kreuzburg, served early notice that she would give Mrs. Stokes a rough time. Shooting par four and five on the first two holes, she went into an immediate two up lead on Mrs. Stokes, who bogied twice. Going into the ninth tee, Mrs. Kreuzburg was three up. There, Mrs. Stokes, whose tee shots had been a bit on the erratic side, recovered to sink a birdie three from 8 feet away to cut the deficit to two.

On the 488-yard twelfth hole, Mrs. Stokes registered a birdie four to trim the margin to one. That distance remained going to the eighteenth. They both were within 2 feet of the pin in four strokes, but the match ended when Mrs. Stokes' putt rimmed the cup, but stayed out.

Mrs. Kreuzburg is paired against Mrs. Schludberg and Mrs. Bell against Mrs. Glick in today's semifinals.

Yesterday's quarter-finals results:
First flight—Mrs. Maurice Glick (Woodholme) defeated Mrs. C. E. Richards (Country Club of Maryland), 5 and 4; Mrs. M. L. Bell (Baltimore Country Club) defeated Mrs. Marie Walper (Prince Georges), 3 and 1; Mrs. Florence Godfrey (Congressional) defeated Mrs. W. R. Stokes (Manor), 2 up; Mrs. T. E. Schludberg (Baltimore Country Club) defeated Mrs. Marie Walper (Prince Georges), 3 and 1; Mrs. Maurice Glick (Woodholme) defeated Mrs. C. E. Richards (Country Club of Maryland), 5 and 4; Mrs. M. L. Bell (Baltimore Country Club) defeated Mrs. Marie Walper (Prince Georges), 3 and 1; Mrs. Florence Godfrey (Congressional) defeated Mrs. W. R. Stokes (Manor), 2 up; Mrs. T. E. Schludberg (Baltimore Country Club) defeated Mrs. Marie Walper (Prince Georges), 3 and 1.

Today's Semifinal Pairings:
First flight, 10:10 a. m.—Mrs. Glick vs. Mrs. Bell; 10:10 a. m.—Mrs. Kreuzburg vs. Mrs. Schludberg.
Second flight, 9:45 a. m.—Mrs. Long vs. Mrs. Manohar; 9:50 a. m.—Mrs. Peterson vs. Mrs. Walper.
Third flight, 9:35 a. m.—Mrs. Lacy vs. Mrs. Hansen; 9:40 a. m.—Mrs. Ferguson vs. Mrs. Avasit.

Babe Ruth Says Night Ball Lops Years Off Careers

Dallas, Texas, July 9 (AP).—Night baseball definitely will shorten the playing span of major league players, Babe Ruth, who spent 22 years in the big time, told a group of American Legion junior baseball players today.

"But there isn't much you can do about it since the man and woman who pay the freight like nocturnal ball," he said.

On a tour of Legion baseball centers, Ruth participated in a downtown parade and was guest at a Legion doubleheader tonight. The Bambino's comments on playing under the lights came as he was urging the junior players attending a luncheon to "practice, practice, practice in daylight, and under the lights."

"I played 22 years," Ruth said, "but do you think I could have lasted that long playing night baseball?"

"Certainly not."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

NLRB: This agency would be able to hire between 600 and 700 new employees if Congress votes the additional $4,025,300 recommended by the President. In fact, the increase could be up to 1000 under the President's plan.

In a message to Congress, the President said it was "very difficult" to anticipate the budget and personnel needs of the National Labor Relations Board since the Taft-Hartley Act will have "radical impact" on its workload and organization.

He urged that the board's regular appropriations, plus the proposed $4,025,300 deficiency—which would total nine million dollars—be made available for eight months. In other words, that the agency be permitted to return to Congress early next year for additional operating funds if work piles up under the act. The board has about 700 employees now. About half of its proposed increase would be in this city.

CONCILIATION: The President asked the Congress to appropriate $2,550,000 for the new and independent Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service which is to be created on August 22 under the Labor Act. The staff of Labor's Conciliation Service will be transferred to the new agency on August 22. In addition, upward of 200 new persons will be hired. The agency will need to set up budget, personnel, and legal offices, since the Conciliation agency now receives such service from Labor Department units.

Incidentally, about 100 Conciliation Service employees have been given notices of firing and downgradings to become effective on the day it's to be transferred. The layoffs and demotions were ordered after the House voted its deep budget cut. Director Edgar Warren, whose resignation is in, will urge his successor to cancel them.

RFC: Insiders on Capitol Hill hint that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will be given a budget slash by the House Appropriations Committee. They say that the President's budget for RFC has been completely reworked and scaled down by the committee staff. The President's budget provided for about 3000 employees, the agency's present strength.

However, in continuing RFC for one year, Congress restricted its lending operations and forbade it to buy mortgages on veterans' homes, among other things. As a result, the Appropriations Committee members are said to feel that a big personnel reduction is in order. The RFC budget will be carried in the final deficiency bill to be reported around July 18.

PARKING: The 940 employees who park their cars in the lot behind the old District Building were asked yesterday to sign a petition protesting the proposed rate increase from $2 to $5 a month. The higher rate is supposed to become effective next Tuesday.

Copies of the petition will go to the White House and to Public Buildings Administration which has approved the higher fee. Because of the many protests against the increase, PBA has asked the White House also to approve it.

RETIREMENT: The potent House Rules Committee yesterday voted overwhelmingly to bottle up the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson retirement bill, the most important Federal employee reform measure before this Congress. Its action kills the bill.

However, an attempt will be made to draft another bill to meet the committee's objections. George Moore, staff director of the House Civil Service Committee, immediately started work on a new bill. He was given very little encouragement by Rules Committee members, who frankly said it would be next to impossible to present a bill that would get their approval.

Representative Cox (D., Ga.) led the fight against approval. Chairman Allen of the Rules Committee favored the legislation. Cox attacked a provision which would permit an employee to retire at 55 on a very small pension after 10 years of service. He took the position that the modest annuity would make him independent. A dozen other features also were criticized.

A stout defense of the bill was made by Rees (R., Kans.), Stevenson (R., Wis.), Miller (D., Calif.) and Corbett (R., Pa.).

BUDGET BUREAU: Many employees and officials in this agency will have their vacations cut short because of the slow-poke way in which the Congress has handled appropriations bills.

PAY RAISES: The Langer Subcommittee has agreed tentatively to approve the Flanders-Baldwin bill to raise salaries of Cabinet members and other Federal officials. However, Chairman Langer insists that the bill be broadened to include other Federal officials whose salaries haven't been increased since before the war. An excellent point.

UPWA: Tom Richardson, vice president of CIO's left-wing United Public Workers, charges Negroes are the first to be fired in economy-minded layoffs in many Federal agencies.

DefendedRep. Kefauver Hints
Colleagues Don't Like Workers to Have Independent Ideas

Representative Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) laid it on the line yesterday in a defense of free speech for Federal workers.

He hinted that some of his colleagues don't want Federal workers to have independent or original ideas, or to express opinions at variance with their own.

"If our Government service is not to be reduced to a mass of unthinking, spineless robots," he said, "let's have an end to these senseless inquisitions that besmirch the names of honest citizens."

Kefauver was referring to the near witch hunt among employees of the Library of Congress that was unmasked in The Washington Post last Sunday. The article told how library employees were attacked by the legislative subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee.

The Tennesseean said that no charge could have been "more thoughtless or unjustified" than the attack on Dr. Jack Levin whom he described as a Government researcher of long and honorable public service. Kefauver said that Levin's value to government has presumably been compromised because he had helped him write his book, "20th Century Congress," which was critical of Congress in some respects.

The legislator made plain that he assumed full responsibility for policy statement made in the book and that Levin merely did research for him before he was employed by the library. He then said: "The same type of innuendo—that something is wrong because an able citizen and capable public servant does not think our present organization on Capitol Hill is perfect—was hurled at another brilliant student of government, Dr. George Galloway." Kefauver said that Galloway, too, had helped him on his book.

He went on to say that "the type of inquisition that has been carried on by some members of a few congressional committees is driving good men away from Government and is making it unacceptable to many whom we need during these difficult days."

Kefauver's remarks were carried in the appendix of the Congressional Record.

Prisoner Ruled
Serving 21 Years

Philadelphia, July 8 (AP).—Frank Harris is going to be freed from prison after serving 21 years for a slaying his attorney claims he did not commit.

Governor James H. Duff approved a commutation of the 49-year-old Philadelphia Negro's sentence after Attorney Herbert L. Marks laid before the State Pardon Board what he termed absolute proof of Harris' innocence.

State Senator John W. Lord, Jr., Philadelphia, said he would ask the next legislature to compensate Harris for his long years in jail.

Harris was convicted of murdering another Negro in 1926. Marks conducted an investigation which he said brought to light ballistic evidence that Harris' gun could not have fired the fatal bullet.

Terminal Leave Orders Qualify GIs for Training
Persons being separated from the armed forces may use their terminal leave orders as a basis for obtaining temporary certificates of eligibility for education or training under the GI Bill, the Veterans Administration announced yesterday.

Applicants whose orders show at least eight days of terminal leave, indicating a minimum of 90 days' service, will be given temporary certificates enabling them to take immediate advantage of educational and training privileges. They will not be eligible for substantial allowances until formally discharged, however.

House Bill Advanced For Science Foundation
Legislation creating a National Science Foundation, with special emphasis on cancer and polio research, was approved by the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday and sent to the House for action.

The Senate already has passed a similar bill. Sponsors say the legislation contemplates Federal expenditures of about 25 million dollars annually to promote the progress of science, the national health and welfare and the national defense.

Rio de Janeiro, July 8 (AP).—A municipal court judge tonight refused to accept the divorce statements of Magda Lupeacu and former King Carol of Romania and declared the secret marriage of the famous lovers is "purely provisional" until proof of their original Bucharest divorce is received in Rio.

To Ask Full House
Group for Approval

A House District subcommittee yesterday voted to give four police headquarters squad chiefs the pay of captain while they hold their present assignments.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) agreed to ask the full House District Committee to approve the pay boosts. Beall's group heard Commissioner John Russell Young join with Police Major and Superintendent Robert J. Barrett in urging the plan.

Major Barrett said the four officers affected were Lieutenants Aubrey Tolson, head of the general assignment squad; Jeremiah Flaherty, in charge of the homicide squad; Robert V. Murray, robbery squad chief; and Harry Blackman, in charge of special investigations.

He said their pay as lieutenants was $4278.42 a year, and the pay of a captain was $5023.29 a year.

He told the subcommittee two special investigators in the Detective Bureau now draw the pay of captain while working under lieutenants.

Beall's group also approved a bill to make the Park Service pay the District for Park Police services now charged to the city.

Army Employee
Embezzlement

Dewey M. Radcliffe, 48, operations chief at Dalecarlia Reservoir, was charged yesterday with embezzling about $1000 in building materials from the Government.

The case against Radcliffe was continued by United States Commissioner C. E. Turnage until July 16. Radcliffe was released under $1000 bond.

According to the FBI, Radcliffe embezzled from reservoir stores 700 board feet of floor lumber, 10 gallons of paint, one electric stove, two ladders, two compressors and two motors. The FBI said Radcliffe took the materials to improve his home at 5906 Dalecarlia pl. n.w., when the materials were scarce on the market.

He is a civilian employee under the Army Engineers. During the war, Radcliffe was a lieutenant colonel with the Engineers. The FBI said Radcliffe told them he intended to return the materials or compensate the Government for what he used but had not yet done so.

China Charges
New Attacks
By Mongolia

Nanking, July 9 (AP).—A Central News Agency dispatch from Urumchi (Tihwa) charged today that Outer Mongolian troops and planes have made four new attacks on Chinese positions in Sinkiang Province.

The dispatch said military authorities in Sinkiang requested the foreign office to lodge "a strong protest" to Outer Mongolia, with a warning that further frontier incidents would lead to "military action."

The foreign office would not comment on the dispatch. Last week, however, a spokesman said the government was preparing a second note to Outer Mongolia. Previously, China protested to both Outer Mongolia and Russia after Outer Mongolian troops invaded Sinkiang Province and fought a battle with Chinese units at Peitashan June 6. Russia disclaimed any part in the incident. Outer Mongolia claimed Peitashan was within its territory.

Central said 300 Outer Mongolian cavalry troops invaded Sinkiang on the night of June 26 and that Chinese troops pushed them back across the border at noon the next day.

Kung to Visit U. S.
Peiping, China, July 9 (AP).—H. H. Kung, former premier of China, plans a visit to the United States soon to arrange central bank and other business remittances helpful to the Chinese economy, it was reported unofficially today.

Reds Lose Three Bases
Nanking, July 9 (AP).—Government troops have captured three important Communist supplies bases in a new Shantung province offensive which opened last week, Information Director Hollington K. Tong said today.

Tong said the bases at Nanma, the previous fiscal year.

Newspapers
Are Denounced
By Rep. O'HaraClaims News Stories
And Editorials Unfair
On His Tax Fight

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) yesterday took the House floor to denounce Washington newspapers for their reporting and editorials about his exemption for Federal employees in the new District income tax bill.

O'Hara led the successful fight in Congress for exemption from the District income tax for all Federal employees here who have legal domicile outside the District.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), who opposed the O'Hara plan, joined O'Hara in criticizing the editorials. Both are members of the House District Committee, and its fiscal affairs subcommittee which drafted the new revenue bill.

Includes Post
On his exemption plan, O'Hara said "some of the news reporting has been particularly unfair and the editorials have been rather viciously unfair in some of our downtown newspapers."

He did not name any paper in his speech. He made clear later The Post was one of the papers he was talking about.

"Some of the editorials," he told the House, "have been so vicious, so slanted and so absolutely devoid of the principles of fairness and facts about the issues involved that it amounts to complete disrespect of the dignity of the House."

"I would like to say this to some of our newspapers downtown. If they expect us to be fair and considerate with the District and the interests which may be involved, it is about time they be as reasonably considerate of the differences of opinion which may be here."

He cited the 222-to-78 vote by which the House adopted its Federal employee exemption plan. The vote forced the Senate to reverse its earlier unanimous rejection of the O'Hara plan.

O'Hara told the House the editorials had apparently given the House "no credit" for boosting the annual Federal payment to the District from 8 to 12 million dollars a year.

Representative Smith said he believed the local newspapers would serve the public better "and get a better atmosphere in Congress if they were a little more patient and a little less critical of Congress, and would sometimes give Congress credit for trying to do the right thing."

House Group Puts Off Action
On Navy Postgraduate School

The House Rules Committee temporarily withheld action yesterday on a bill to authorize construction of a Navy post-graduate school at Monterey, Calif.

Chairman Allen (R., Ill.) told reporters the bill was not rejected but would be considered again. No date was set, however.

The bill would appropriate $2,500,000 for purchase of a 600-acre tract on Monterey Bay, where the Navy operated a pre-flight training school during the war. The post-graduate school would accommodate between 500 and 600 officers.

Chairman Bates (R., Mass.) of the Armed Service Subcommittee which approved the bill, told the Rules Committee the additional space for postgraduate training was "urgently needed." The Navy now is giving 1500 officers such training at Annapolis, Md.; Newport, R. I.; and in civilian colleges and universities, he said.

Representative Cox (D., Ga.) asked him, "Is it the Navy's ambition to acquire this big hotel, with bridge paths and golf courses and so on?"

"Yes," Bates replied. "The Navy says it would cost between $5000 and $6000 per man to expand any other of its facilities in order to give this training."

"It is a fine hotel," Bates said. "The Navy's original proposal was to spend $28,750,000 at Monterey to provide a school for 3000 officers. Bates said. This was rejected by his committee, he added, and the Navy scaled its plans down to the $2,500,000 proposal."

Linchu and Tungtien, all within 90 miles southeast of Tainan, were taken, cutting off Communist supply lines to central and Eastern Shantung."

Bankruptcy Petitions Up Sharply at Norfolk
Norfolk, Va., July 9 (AP).—Petitions for bankruptcy filed in United States District Court here in the fiscal year ended July 1 almost doubled those filed in the same period of 1945-46.

The increase during the 1947 half of the year was more marked than the first six months, with the 1946-47 total amounting to 59 petitions or 26 more than during the largest number of persons."

Tuck Orders Empty
TB Beds FilledIn a Basement
Woman, 65:
23 Cats
And 3 Dogs

A 65-year-old woman was found guilty yesterday of violating health regulations by using the basement of her rooming house as a shelter home for 23 stray cats and three dogs.

Mrs. Addie Stricker, who resides at 715 Mount Vernon pl. n.w., protested that she was very fond of her transient pets, but didn't allow them to become a health menace.

"I just allow most of them to stay overnight if they want to," she told Judge Nadine Gallagher of Municipal Court.

The judge replied, "I know you are lonely and get a sense of satisfaction out of helping dumb animals. But you must cease making your place an open house for stray animals. I'm going to suspend sentence and you must reduce the number of animals you keep."

Mrs. Stricker said she had no plans as to how she would rid herself of the animals. She said "about ten" of the cats were pets, the others "transients."

Reporters were denied access to Mrs. Stricker's home. However, looking over her backyard fence, they saw 10 cats and a playful black dog.

William T. Needham, District sanitary inspector, said Mrs. Stricker's neighbors complained about odors from her place. He said that when he investigated he found 23 cats and 3 dogs in the basement. In one room, he related, a bed was made—apparently for the comfort of the felines.

"She also had a plank rigged up, between the house and the backyard. I guess you'd call it a catwalk," Needham testified.

On the other hand, Mrs. Stricker's roomers testified that she kept a spotless house and managed to keep the animals in the basement or backyard.

Safety Code
For Window
Washers HitProposed Rules Held Unnecessary, Too
Costly, by Owners

The Building Owners and Managers Association yesterday attacked the proposed safety code for window washers here on grounds it was unnecessary and would cost building owners at least three million dollars.

The attack drew quick response from the District's Director of Industrial Safety and from the Window-Cleaners Union, who said workers needed the added protection and termed the association's cost estimates for safety devices too high.

BOMA Public Relations Director Morris R. Clark, in a letter to the Industrial Safety Board, said "Washington is not a skyscraper city." Procedures already developed here, he added, "place the operation on a comparable safety ratio with other cities where stricter codes are in existence."

Robert P. Bailey, secretary-treasurer of Local 229, Window-Cleaners Union (AFL), replied that it was difficult to obtain workers here because the job is so "hard."

The labor supply is much better in New York and Philadelphia, where safety laws are strict, he said.

Both Bailey and Fred C. Thomas, Director of Industrial Safety, took exception to Clark's estimate that safety anchors on 500,000 windows here would cost owners $6 per window. Thomas said two companies had supplied estimates of about $4 per window.

Income Limit
On Child Care
Is Protested

Three hundred children who attended public day care centers last year will be ruled out if Congress approves a $2000 income ceiling on parents participating in the program.

Assistant Public Welfare Director Raymond F. Clapp said yesterday that the ceiling will bring "real hardship" to the parents of these children.

The $2000 ceiling was fixed by the House Appropriations Committee when it recommended that Congress vote $150,000 for the Department of Public Welfare to continue six of the centers. Last year 400 children were enrolled in 12 centers.

The extent of hardship to two families was told The Post yesterday by Miss Lucille Lewis, superintendent of the centers.

A mother, the sole support of her 5-year-old boy, also must pay for the care of her husband hospitalized for an incurable illness. During the past year this mother sent the boy to one of the centers while she earned $2100.

Because of the day care centers another mother who earns $2028 was able to have her nursery age child with her in the evenings and over weekends. If the centers are closed to her, next year the child will live with grandparents in South Carolina.

These stories, Miss Lewis said, are typical of those of parents of place to go.

Va. Health Officials
Directed to Recruit Necessary Employees

Richmond, Va., July 9 (AP).—Governor Tuck today put the full power of the State government behind the health department's efforts to fill the empty beds in Virginia's tuberculosis sanatoria.

In a directive somewhat similar to his recent order that the mental hospitals be rehabilitated, the Governor directed the State health authorities to proceed immediately to recruit necessary employees and said that approval would be given to such salary increases as are shown to be necessary to fill all vacant beds.

The tuberculosis sanatoria are confronted with the situation of having a waiting list of about 300 patients and about the same number of vacant beds. The waiting list, however, consists of so-called terminal patients—TB victims who are completely bedridden. The vacant beds are in the pavilions that now are suitable only for ambulatory cases. There is no personnel available as yet to handle the additional terminal cases.

The new policy was expressed in a telegram today to Dr. J. B. Nicholls, superintendent of Catawba Sanatorium, near Roanoke, in which the Governor said:

"My attention has been called to an editorial in the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot of Sunday, July 6, and to news articles in various other Virginia papers of the preceding week quoting you to the effect that a 25 per cent increase in the Catawba sanatorium salary scale is necessary in order for you to obtain needed personnel and fill the 115 beds now reported vacant there . . .

"I am unable to recall any instance in which a request for a salary increase at Catawba has been withheld during my administration and the State personnel director advises me he is unable to recall such an instance for some time before.

"It is our duty to make available to you the funds necessary to enable you to properly discharge these important State functions in the care of our unfortunate victims of tuberculosis.

"Please proceed at once to recruit all necessary employees. Approval will be given to such salary increases as are shown to be necessary to fill all vacant beds."

The Governor transmitted a copy of this telegram to Dr. L. J. Roper, State Commissioner of Health, and told him the policy applied not only to Catawba but to Piedmont Sanatorium at Burkeville and to Blue Ridge Sanatorium at Charlottesville.

Miss Uhland Gets
Bureau Aide Post

Appointment of Martha C. Uhland of 6116 Western ave., Chevy Chase, to the staff of the Bureau of Rehabilitation as a group worker, was announced yesterday by Dr. G. Howland Shaw, president of the board of directors.

Miss Uhland, a senior at the University of Maryland majoring in sociology, has for the past two years been carrying out educational and recreational programs in the Industrial Home School as a volunteer, aided by a group of 200 young people representing seven District churches, Dr. Shaw said.

As a staff member of the Bureau, a Community Chest agency, she will extend her work to all institutions for correction in the District.

Resolution Would Provide Senate
With Photographer

The Senate could hire an official photographer at $5600 a year under a resolution introduced yesterday.

Its sponsors were Senators Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.), Arthur Capper (R., Kans.), Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.), Hugh Butler (R., Neb.), Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.), Edwin Brewster (R., Me.), Owen C. Johnson (D., Colo.) and Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.).

The photographer's salary and expenses would be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate. The resolution was sent to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

Tilden Asks Release
Los Angeles, July 8 (AP).—Tennis star William T. Tilden today asked for his release from a county road camp where he has spent nearly six months for a morals offense. He said hard labor at the road camp was undermining his health.

Three fourths of the children who have been attending the centers. Each family was carefully screened by Welfare Department social workers to make sure of need, he said. If a child attended a center it was because he had no other place to go.

Maryland Lists 174 Single-Room Schools

Baltimore, July 9 (AP).—The traditional one-room "Little Red Schoolhouse," presided over by a single teacher, is on its way out in Maryland—but it will "take years," the department of education has reported.

The department issued a list of statistics showing there were 174 single-room schoolhouses in Maryland—28 alone in Garrett County and 20 in Dorchester County.

The department also reported: A total of 399 school buildings with outside toilets.

That of the State's 5389 classrooms, 1017 are "substandard."

Maryland needs an estimated 1203 additional school rooms.

Only 64 schools—about 14 percent of the total in Maryland—have cafeterias.

The department has instituted a long-range program designed to wipe out deficiencies, but officials said many years would pass before all students would be able to work under proper conditions.

A total of $62,855,000 has been appropriated by the State and its various subdivisions for new school buildings.

Policemen Accused
Salisbury, Md., July 9 (AP).—Rex A. Taylor, Worcester County State's Attorney, said today local troopers of the Maryland State Police would answer in open court Saturday a prisoner's charge he was beaten after his arrest.

Taylor said he had talked with all officers connected with the arrest of Charles Foster, 27, on June 23 and the result of his investigation would be presented when Foster's trial is resumed Saturday morning.

Foster was being tried on charges of larceny and receiving stolen goods when he told Judge Levin Claude Bailey he had been taken to the State Police barracks and threatened.

Ferry Stops Running
Richmond, Va., July 9 (AP).—The Sunny Bank ferry across the Little Northumberland County will be out of operation from July 10 to July 15 while undergoing repairs, the State Highway Department announced today.

Pettis Given New Duty
Richmond, Va., July 9 (AP).—Dr. James B. Pettis, superintendent of the Western State Hospital at Staunton, has been given temporary additional duty as superintendent of the Dejeanette State Sanatorium, also at Staunton.

The temporary appointment was made by Dr. Joseph E. Barrett, State Commissioner of Mental Hygiene and Hospitals, subject to the approval of the hospital board, which meets tomorrow.

Dr. Pettis will direct the work at the Dejeanette Hospital pending the designation of a successor to the late Dr. Hugh Page Newell.

Dejeanette State Sanatorium is at the eastern edge of Staunton, about 2 miles from Western State Hospital. It is the only State mental hospital in Virginia where patients may pay the cost of their treatment.

Postmasters Nominated
By The Associated Press
President Truman has sent to the Senate today postmaster nominations for Maryland and Virginia: Shirley J. Eshel, Gibson Island, Md.; Golda S. Himmberg, Mayo, Md.; William F. Mann, Finksburg, Md.; William Edgar Ensor, Sparks, Md.; Henrietta G. Montgomery, Denbigh, Va.; Daniel William Moffett, Warrenton, Va.; and Thomas S. Hawkes, Jr., Wellville, Va.

School Principal Named
Roanoke, Va., July 9 (AP).—William David Payne has been named principal of Jefferson Senior High School here to succeed E. B. Broadwater, who resigned to become principal of Andrew Lewis High in Salem.

Rate Increase Studied
Richmond, Va., July 9 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission has taken under advisement a petition of Virginia rail carriers for a 20 percent increase in the intrastate rates on the shipment of fertilizer after representatives of Federal, State and nongovernmental farm agencies charged the boost would hurt not only farmers but, ultimately, the railroads themselves.

Walter D. Matson, United States Department of Agriculture consultant, urged the commission, even should it grant the increases, to correct what he called an inequity between the rates on limestone and on marl, which he termed "geologically speaking, a low-grade limestone."

Fund Quarters Opened
Charlottesville, Va., July 9 (AP).—Admiral William F. Halsey today officially opened headquarters for the University of Virginia Development Fund. Halsey, an alumnus of the university class of 1900, will serve as chairman of the fund-raising effort, with T. M. Carruthers, 74, as executive vice chairman.

Officers for Admiral Halsey's staff of volunteer workers have been constructed under the main floor of the historic rotunda. Plans are now being made for over-all operation of the fund-raising program.

Helicopter Duster
Hagerstown, Md., July 9 (AP).—A Chambersburg, Pa., packing house reported it would use low-flying helicopters to dust tomato crops in Washington County in efforts to combat late blight.

The packer said the helicopters were able to dust 100 acres in three hours of flying time in a recent test.

Spa Creek Bridge Opens
Annapolis, Md., July 9 (AP).—The new Spa Creek Bridge between Annapolis and Eastport opened for traffic today to the sounding of industrial whistles and many motorists drove over the span just to see what it was like.

Pedestrians also inspected the bridge, which will be dedicated as a memorial to veterans of World War II.

The span is the double leaf bascule type and replaces a wooden structure that served the two communities for many years.

Hospital Beds Vacant
Burkeville, Va., July 9 (AP).—Thirty bed vacancies exist in the infirmary buildings at Piedmont Sanatorium here because of a lack of help, Dr. Charles W. Scott, superintendent and medical director, said today, expressing a belief that increased pay is necessary to obtain professional and skilled personnel.

The State sanatorium has a bed capacity of 269 for treatment of Negro tuberculosis patients, including 172 infirmary and 97 pavilion beds.

Dr. Scott said there were 167 on the waiting list for the infirmary buildings, which are equipped to care for "very ill and strictly bed patients," while usually there were about 100 persons on the waiting list.

Mayor Bans Gold Leaf
Huntington, W. Va., July 9 (AP).—Gold-painted door signs on the offices of city officials come under the head of "just vanity," Mayor Douglas C. Tomkins says, and administration officials henceforth will have to do without them.

The mayor, commenting that it had been the custom for incoming city administration heads to have their names lettered in gold leaf on their doors at the city hall, had this to say:

"It's been costing the city around $300 a year. It's just vanity. As far as I'm concerned, a lot of people don't know who I am and I don't care. Some of them don't know who the mayor is from one city administration to the next."

Peanut Meeting Canceled
A meeting between Virginia peanut producers and members of the State's delegation in Congress to discuss the possibility of a referendum on 1948 peanut marketing quotas was not held as planned yesterday. An aide to Representative Hardy (D., Va.) said that producer representatives were unable to come here yesterday and that no date has been set for a future meeting.

Wharf Permit Sought
Baltimore, July 9 (AP).—The War Department's district engineer announced receipt of an application by Herbert E. Everett of Edgewater Beach, Md., for permission to build a timber wharf 80 feet into South River from the south shore. A mile upstream from the highway bridge at Edgewater in Anne Arundel County.

The director charged Bassoff had no right to represent the tenants before the OPA in event of appeal, since he had not been out of the employ more than a year. The attorney said the fact that he was a tenant qualified him.

The closing session of the three-day conference today will be highlighted by a discussion of "Leadership Training" by Owen Knight, supervisor of guidance for Montgomery County.

Orphans Court Morgue to Aid Right Upheld Identification In Md. Ruling Of Torso
Annapolis, Md., July 9 (AP).—The Maryland Court of Appeals today reaffirmed the right of the Orphans Court judges to grant letters of administration so long as they remain within bounds set by the Legislature.

The ruling had an ironic element in that members of the State's highest courts as individuals have gone on record as favoring abolishing the Orphans Court. In a case in which two brothers, Joseph and Adolph Langenfelder, sought the right to administer the estate of Annie Glasel, former Baltimore resident, the court held that the lower tribunal was within its right in choosing Adolph Langenfelder as administrator.

"It is undeniable that the power conferred by Legislature upon the Orphans Courts to grant letters to one of a class entitled to administration is not an arbitrary or capricious discretion, but a judicial discretion, which must be exercised in accordance with the rules of law down by the Legislature," the high court said.

"Whole orders passed in the exercise of the discretion conferred upon the Orphans Court will not be reviewed by the Court of Appeals. Any action taken in contravention or disregard of the plain letter and intent of the statutes prescribing the course it shall pursue in exercising that discretion may be reviewed on appeal."

Rent Control Bill Approved By Senate Unit
The Senate District Committee yesterday approved and sent to the Senate a three-month extension of Washington's rent control act.

Already passed by the House, the measure will go to the White House if the Senate approves it. As the action progressed, two other rent moves developed in the Greater Washington area:

1. Increases averaging 5 1/2 percent on 79 apartment units at 3800 14th st. n.w., recommended by Rent Control Examiner Robert T. Smith.

2. Silver Spring's Spring Knoll Apartment tenants prepared to carry their fight against rent increases to OPA headquarters.

Tenants Consider Appeal
As now written, the District's extension would allow one more month of rent control than the rest of the Nation. District leaders sought the extra month for review of the Washington rent and housing situation. The extension would carry it through March 31, 1948.

An appeal of the 3800 14th st. apartment recommendation was being considered by tenants last night, according to their attorney, G. Gregg Evergreen. John L. Warren, apartment house owner, sought 10 percent boosts to cover increased operating costs, taxes and capital improvements since January 1, 1941.

Present rents range from $35 to $100 per month. The increase would add between $1 and $11.

Loaded Bus Slides 174 Feet On Its Side

Covington, Va., July 9 (AP).—Twenty Greyhound bus passengers, en route from Covington to Charleston, W. Va., were injured in the early hours today when the big bus climbed a 10-foot embankment near here and slid on its side for 174 feet.

The injured were treated at Allegheny Hospital here for minor cuts and bruises. One passenger suffered a fractured shoulder.

Orville Chilton Hill, driver of the bus, told a State trooper that he stepped on the brake on the long and slippery Boys Home Hill, about a mile west of here, and that a rear wheel locked. Hill said the bus swayed and he lost control as it plunged up a 10-foot embankment and then dropped back onto the highway on its side and skidded.

State Police Sgt. W. E. Lambeth said the driver broke the windshield and helped the 33 passengers from the bus. A first-aid crew from Covington and two ambulances took the injured to the hospital.

Va. Cities Led By Alexandria In Teacher Pay
Alexandria's minimum wage for school teachers during the coming school year will be the highest of any city in Virginia, Arlington leads all Virginia counties.

Figures revealed in a recent survey by the Virginia Education Association showed that Alexandria, which has led in the minimum figure for the last two years, will base its wage scale at $2325 this year. This is $500 higher than the maximum of some cities in the State.

The survey showed that the city of Harrisonburg is second with $2050. It jumped from twentieth place, last year, among 24 cities polled, by granting an $850 increase.

Arlington's minimum of $2400, including a $700 increase over last year, led the counties. Grayson County at $2100 jumped from seventy-ninth to second place by increasing minimums $990.

Fairfax County ranked third at $2000. Alexandria's maximum of $3000 put it in fifth place in that category, $250 behind Newport News, the leader. Fairfax County's maximum of $2800 placed it second among counties behind Bland's $2936.

Chile-Soviet Envoy Trouble Threatens Rift
Santiago, Chile, July 9 (AP).—Official circles reported today that Chile has threatened to recall her diplomatic representatives from Moscow unless satisfactory explanation was given to charges that Chilean diplomats to the Russian capital did not receive proper treatment.

The informants said Vice President Luis Alberto Cuevas told Soviet Ambassador Dimitri Zhukov that if the explanation was not forthcoming within 48 hours, the Chilean representatives could be ordered back and Zhukov could be declared persona non grata in Chile.

Cuevas was reported to have insisted that Chilean diplomats in Moscow be accorded the same treatment as that received by the Russians here.

Authorized government sources said that among the complaints against the Russians was one that the son of former Ambassador David Cruz Ocampo had not been permitted to bring his wife out of Russia because she was a Soviet citizen.

The informants said also that two Chilean Embassy attendants were unable to find proper housing facilities in Moscow.

Americans Decorated by Czechs

By Marie McNair

A score of officers plus one, and a member of a noted Czechoslovak family stepped up smartly to receive decorations from the Czech government yesterday afternoon at the embassy.

The men had all had a part in the liberation of Czechoslovakia, some on the battle lines, others from their desks in Washington. Capt. Prince Edward Lobkowicz, member of the Czech branch of the distinguished Polish family, came down from New York to receive his token of appreciation from his fatherland.

The ceremony took place at 4:30 in the sunlit embassy drawing room with a reception following. As it was strictly a military gathering, the Ambassador of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Slavik had turned over the hosts' duties to the Military Attache of the Embassy and Mme. Schejbal.

Highest Award to Hoge

Maj. Gen. W. M. Hoge of Fort Belvoir was one to receive the highest decoration—the Czechoslovak War Cross, 1939. As general officer commanding the Fourth United States Armored Division, he led his division across the Bavarian border in April, 1945, into Czechoslovakia. His men, collaborating with other United States units broke the last German resistance and prevented widespread looting by the Nazis in southeast Bohemia.

The Medal of Merit, first class, went to Admiral Thomas B. Inglis, USN. Others receiving awards were Maj. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Rear Admiral Hawlett Thebaud, Col. Raymond E. Bell, Col. Ernest A. Bixby, Col. Willoughby F. Brazeau, Col. Walter Burnside, Col. Sherman V. Hasbrouck, Col. John H. Hinds, Col. Hugo Kenyon, Col. John C. Whitcomb, Col. Ralph Zwicker, Capt. John Lansing Callan, USNR, Capt. Floyd F. Ferris, USN, Lieut. Col. James O. Boswell, Lieut. Col. Randolph D. Dickens, Lieut. Col. Alfred E. Graham, Lieut. Col. Richard McKee, Lieut. Col. Richard Weaver and Lieut. Sidney S. Alderman.

Wives of the men were also present.

Capt. Floyd Ferris was accompanied by Mrs. Ferris, in a bright summer print gown, and their daughter, Alwilda. Mrs. Hoge was in all white, topping her frock with a wide-brimmed hat covered with white roses. Captain Callan brought along his niece, pretty Elizabeth Callan, brown eyed and brown haired, and her green and white print frock was in effective contrast to her summer tan. Captain Callan was United States Attache with the Czechoslovak Government in London.

French to Present FDR Decoration To Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will accept the medaille militaire, posthumously awarded to President Roosevelt, from the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, on Monday afternoon at 4:45 o'clock. The ceremony will take place at the French Embassy, followed by a reception.

The decoration is the highest French military medal. It is awarded as an expression of "the French people's grateful feelings for the man who took a decisive part in the United Nations' victory and in the liberation of France."

Close colleagues of the late President, including Cabinet members, Supreme Court justices and Army and Navy officials have been invited to attend.

Capt. John Lansing Callan, USNR, awarded the Medal of Merit, brought along his niece, Miss Elizabeth Callan, for the ceremony and reception which followed.

Miss Scurlock Is Federation's Youth Convention Director

By Genevieve Reynolds

For the first time in its history, the General Federation of Women's Clubs will have a paid, professional worker to head a department. She is Miss Stella Scurlock, former Children's Bureau welfare worker here who will direct the organization's youth conservation department. Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, new federation head, announced the appointment yesterday at a press conference held at 1734 N. st. nw.

At the same time she revealed that two District women will have charge of the federation's legislative department. Mrs. Leslie B. Wright of 4820 30th st. nw., will serve as chairman, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley of 2345 Ashmead pl., retiring legislation chairman, will remain in the department as consultant.

Cites Long Need

In discussing the appointment of Miss Scurlock, Mrs. Buck said: "We feel that we have reached the point where we need a professional setup. No volunteer could give her full time to the job. Our director will have a full-time secretary and will be available to travel and aid State federation's youth conservation programs."

Miss Scurlock succeeds Judge Anna Kröss of New York City, who will continue in the department as a consultant. In fact, the two are mapping out programs in a New York conference this week.

Mrs. Buck pointed out that the federation's chief efforts will be directed toward youth conservation and international relations during her three-year administration. "All our programs will be channeled in this direction," she explained. "We feel that it is important to strengthen democracy at home through better health, recreation and welfare projects."

In line with her policy of stressing international relations, she said that the American citizenship department had dropped American from its title in order to broaden its scope. "We have always emphasized national good citizenship," she explained. "Not only must we be good citizens of the USA but we must be prepared to be good citizens of the world."

Reversal Explained

A post mortem on the federation's reversal of stand on the Stratton-Bill at the fifty-sixth annual convocation held in New York City recently, showed a barrage of pro and con letters, Mrs. Buck said. The federation first by an overwhelming vote rejected support of the Stratton bill which would admit 400,000 displaced persons into the United States within the next four years on unused immigration quotas. A second vote, two days later, by the delegates endorsed the resolution.

When asked why the switch on the resolution, Mrs. Buck replied: "Our women were looking at the bill from purely a national viewpoint in terms of a housing shortage. Then three speakers—Vera Micheles Dean, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Pearl Buck—explained the international implications of the bill. "Our women then did what all women will have to do," she continued—"change from national to international thinking if we are going to have world peace. After hearing the talks, the uninstructed delegates changed their vote."

Other Chairmen

Other department and committee chairmen include Mrs. Frank J. Pratt, Jr., American home department; Mrs. Mildred R. Hermann of Juneau, Alaska, and Mrs. Rex Seiber of Houghton, Mich., co-chairmen of consumer responsibility division; Mrs. T. C. Carroll of Shepherdsburg, Ky., who is dean of the citizenship department.

Still others are Mrs. Theodore S. Chapman of Jerseyville, Ill., education department chairman; Mrs. John M. Pierce of Springfield, Vt., fine arts department chairman; Mrs. Ambrose Diehl of New York, retiring president of the United States Council of Women, international relations department chairman, with Mrs. William Dick Sporborg as consultant; Mrs. Stephen J. Francisco of Little Falls, N. J., public welfare department.

Miss Maybank To Become Bride

Senator and Mrs. Burnet Rhett Maybank of Charleston, S. C., and Washington, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Roberta Macon Maybank, to George Drummond Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Robert Paul of Charleston.

The announcement was made Sunday afternoon at a party given at the Maybank's summer home, Pine Point, Flat Rock, N. C.

Miss Maybank was graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary, Washington, and from Radcliffe College, Cambridge, Mass. She made her debut at the St. Cecilia ball in Charleston last season.

Mr. Paul is a graduate of Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C. At present he is a partner in Colonial Motors, Inc. He is a member of the Country Club of Charleston and the Carolina Yacht Club.

O'Neals Busy Packing Up For Philippines

By Bessie Hackett

OTHER women may be eagerly scanning fall fashion forecasts, but Mrs. Emmet O'Neal and her two pretty blond daughters, Lydia and Mary, are more interested than ever in summer clothes. They're stocking up on cottons, sandals, and play togs to last at least a year or two.

For when their Washington friends begin to shiver and trudge through the snows of Connecticut ave., the family of the newly appointed United States Ambassador to the Philippines will be strolling under coconut palms, going for a swim in the sun-kissed blue Pacific, and wearing the sheerest of summer apparel.

Both Popular Here

Although the date isn't definite, the O'Neals expect to sail from San Francisco about the middle of August on the President Monroe. In the meantime, they're being feted at a round of farewell parties, for the O'Neals were among the most popular of congressional families during the Ambassador's 12 years as Representative from Kentucky.

Both the girls are graduates of Holton Arms and Vassar, "but our education is just beginning," they declare. The daughters of the Ambassador have no intention of leading a butterfly existence in Manila. Lydia paints, has a preference for portraits, and expects to keep a record in oils and water color of much that she sees. Mary, who took special courses in child study, is toying with the idea of a nursery school, and also hopes to practice her Spanish.

The trip will call a temporary halt to Mrs. O'Neal's hobby of collecting old law books and histories of Kentucky for her husband's library.

The Wrong Books

"Perhaps it's just as well," she sighs ruefully, recalling the time she attended an auction and bought, sight unseen, a case of books she believed would untie many a legal knot. On Christmas morning, Mr. O'Neal eagerly tore the boards off his "surprise"—and found himself owner of a veterinarian's library. No longer does his wife buy "sight unseen."

Although her family has been her career, Mrs. O'Neal was an active worker on war bond committees and with the Red Cross and USO during the war and expects to find much to keep her busy in the war-devastated country to which she is going. And when her reputation for Kentucky charm, fried chicken and corn bread gets around, the O'Neal residence will probably become a mecca for homesick Southerners.

Zontas Hear Convention Proposals

Mrs. Dorothy Scates presented two proposals made at the Zonta International 1947 Convention last month at Mackinac Island, Mich., to the Washington Zonta Club at its luncheon meeting yesterday in Dodge Hotel. President of the local club and delegate to the convention, Mrs. Scates submitted the proposals that each Zonta club contribute $10 annually to a scholarship fund for Guam teachers for study in America and that each club member give $1 to the Marion de Forest Organization Fund in order that it reach its goal.

Do Your Sunning Wisely

THIS up-to-the-minute miss (left) is using the latest in suntan lotions—an insect-repellent mixture which lessens the hazards and annoyances of mosquito bites. Preparations such as these are nonsticky and add to the pleasure of your beach lounging.

HAIR and scalp suffer from sunburn just as much as the skin does, leaving after-effects it sometimes takes a whole season to repair. New sun cover hair lotion is a safeguard to keep hair from over-drying. It is a lotion to be applied in a thin film before and after exposure to the sun.

EYES and the skin around them take a special beating from the glare of the summer sun. To combat sun-squint wrinkles, apply a cream to eye-lids—lightly enough to pass as part of a daily makeup.

Parents Handicap Child With Fear

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

You cannot develop courage in a child by burdening him with fears. Yet parents, in the interest of safety, tend to reiterate the dangers, warn and caution the child until he is afraid to draw a long breath for fear of what will happen to him.

To be courageous a child must have confidence in his environment. He cannot be fearful that the moment he ventures out on his own or attempts some new act that the outcome will be disastrous, or he will always want to huddle close to some protector. When he is told that if he doesn't go to sleep he won't be healthy when he grows up, he carries a terrific load of anxiety to bed with him. Then if he isn't sleepy and cries, his mother complains, "Why should he be afraid of the dark, no one has ever said one word about the dark to him?"

The fear is inside of the child,

the dark is only a fine hatching ground for it. He doesn't want to be alone with his fears, so he cries for his mother or for a light, and she berates him for his cowardice. Threats are productive of fears; they are intended to be so, but the threatening parent does not always foresee all the results she may get. She thinks of her threats as sensible warnings; the child sees them as the inevitable result of his acts.

Mothers will say, "Now be careful when you skate, because if you fall down you might break your ankle." The child is so paralyzed by his cautiousness that he cannot learn to skate. Yet he might skate for years or forever without breaking an ankle. Why handicap him with such a fear?

To instill caution of water, the parent pounds home the dangers of drowning. Then the child in the water, wanting to learn to swim, is so breathless and tense with fear that he is actually imperiled when the water flows over him. His danger is far greater than if he had some boldness and some caution.

One could go on and on. The parent builds into the child the feeling for the ultimate dangers of which any act is possessed and then sends him forth accompanied by these strangling fears.

Life is a poor thing lived on that level and parents are criminal who, to save themselves worry, load the child with such fears that he is incapable of meeting any new situation without apprehension about the result.

Stars 'Pool' Charms To Get Slim in Swim

By Ida Jean Kain

IN HOLLYWOOD, a swimming pool right in your own backyard, is a sign of success. But girls, that's not the main reason the top bracket stars have them. They sink all that money into pools because swimming is beautifully slimming and makes for million dollar figures.

And those bathing beauties really swim. Take Barbara Stanwyck, for example; she swims every day. Barbara is one movie star who readily admits that she is not the least bit athletic or exercise-minded. She wouldn't take calisthenics on a bet! But she rarely misses her daily swim. And she keeps a neat 25-inch waistline, as you can see in her new picture, "The Other Love."

While she is working she can't take time out during the day to swim. But she dives in and swims the length of the pool four or five times before dinner. No matter how tired she is, a swim takes out the kinks, and helps her to feel refreshed and relaxed. And it's the perfect exercise. You need not worry about sprouting knobby muscles, Barbara reassures, for swimming pulls the muscles out long and smooth... that's why it's so streamlining.

Has Many Virtues

OF COURSE, you and I don't have a swimming pool in our backyards... maybe not even a backyard. And it isn't exactly handy to jump in the pool before dinner. But three swims a week can do so much toward well being that it's worthwhile to make the effort. It's the one exercise I know that can keep the working girl from bogging down in the heat. The water affords just enough resistance to make every stroke count toward streamlining. It slims the waist, straightens posture, strengthens weak backs, relaxes tense shoulders... it's wonderful! Besides all that, it takes off fat where you're bumpy and adds curves where curves should be. It cools you off and tones you up at the same time.

Any Style Will Do

IT DOESN'T MATTER particularly what stroke is used, or whether or not you're a good swimmer. It's all exercise, and fun. The backstroke—corrects rounded shoulders, beautifies upper arms and puts curves across the collar bones. The breast stroke is a bit old-fashioned, but there is nothing old-fashioned about the lovely curves it builds. The crawl is for speed.

So girls, even though it's a bit of a nuisance, what with the hair problem and all, swim three times a week this summer... or every day if you can. It will help you to sleep in spite of the heat and, by toning the muscles, keep your figure and your spirits from going into a summer slump.

Bank Women Slate Annual Conclave

The Association of Bank Women will hold its twenty-fifth annual convention, September 26-28, at the Claridge Hotel in Atlantic City, N. J., according to an announcement by Miss Willa Riley, assistant vice president of the Florida National Bank of Jacksonville, Fla., and president of the national association. Mrs. Nancy Blackwell Staub of Morristown, N. J., has been named convention chairman.

The A. B. W. was organized in 1921 by a small group of women bank officers in New York City. It is the only organization of women bank executives in the country and now has a national membership of 765. Its first annual meeting was also held in Atlantic City September, 1923.

Designers Draw Bead on Birds for New Color

When the birds fly south this autumn, they will leave behind their brilliance in the new fall colors. One fabric company has chosen its whole gamut of color tones from bird plumage. The bird tones are figuring prominently in the collections of such leading designers as Nettie Rosenstein, Adrian, Herbert Sondheim, Ben Reig and Pettullo and are also available to women who design their own clothes or make them from patterns at home.

Scarlet Macaw, Tanager, Blue Bird, Jacamar, Lorikeet, Dove and Wood Wren are some of the names given to more than 30 bird tones ranging from a flamboyant orange-red to soft gray and deep warm brown.

Important fabric news, too, is the fact that the lovely textures of cloque and woven jacquards are back in the fashion world after an absence of several years. The new cloque crepes are crisp in texture and beautifully brilliant. A material that won comment at the recent International Textiles Exhibition was a sensational black and gold lame with jacquard woven Napoleonic medallions.

Plain woven rayons and silks are wonderfully pliant for easy draping, an important fabric requirement for 1947. Top favorites with many designers for the smoothly draped lines of the new cocktail and dinner dresses are Cri-Cri, a finely ridged rayon and Cheri, a dull finish mossy crepe.

Woman, 46, Discusses Her Phobic Jealousy With Psychiatrist, Who Exposes Childhood Source, But Still She Can't Conquer Fear

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 46; my husband is 58; and there aren't many men as fine and decent. We both were married before. Our mates are dead. His wife was a very nice woman and they were happily married.

I had one of the best husbands a woman could ask for, but our marriage was miserable due to my insane jealousy, and now I'm starting the same thing over in this marriage. I suffer agony and I'd give anything if someone could help me.

In our living room we have an enlarged picture of his first wife. I notice he often looks at it and when his face gets sad I could scream and tear things; but so far I've kept these feelings under control and he hasn't the slightest inkling of my jealousy. I speak of her in the highest terms and encourage him to talk of her.

I even made a beautiful wreath for her grave and accompanied him to place it there, although I didn't want to. Then when I saw tears in his eyes I died a thousand deaths, but I never let on. He says he cares more for me than he ever did for her, and he shows every day that he loves me devotedly; but how long can I hide my jealousy?

Why Does Husband Eye Other Women?

WHEN he looks at another woman with admiration in his eyes I swear I'll pack up and leave; but I know how miserable I would be without him. Tell me this: If a man loves his wife, why does he look at other women? If a woman is attractive, my husband looks again and again. Is he comparing her to me? I'm very attractive for my age. If you can answer that question satisfactorily, it will do much to quell my jealousy.

I've been to a psychiatrist, who says my jealousy is the aftermath of my childhood. My mother left me when I was five years old. Thereafter when I saw other mothers making a fuss over their children I would go aside and cry and suffer because I had no mother to love me.

Then later I was sent to my mother, who had married again and had other children. When she scolded them a wild unreasoning jealousy would suffocate me and I have felt that way about the ones I love ever since. The psychiatrist says I am the only one who can help me; but I don't seem to make much headway. Please advise. F. D.

An Immature Pair Despite Their Age

DEAR F. D.: Although your husband is 58 and you 46, neither of you is psychologically mature. In fact, you're both pretty infantile; and like small children, exceedingly self-centered.

Great grief for the dead, as felt by mature persons, is stoic, passionless, self contained. There is no other way to bear its weight. Strong adults don't express grief; they absorb it.

Your husband's brimming eye at his first wife's grave refers to self pity, as he thinks how helpless, how lost he felt, when she was taken. So, too, does his long face as he studies her picture—which as a matter of common sense and good taste shouldn't be on display in your living room.

However, your frantic jealousy is largely responsible for all this incense-burning to the dear departed. In drawing him out to talk about her and filling the pauses with glowing praise, also in that maudlin extravagance about the wreath, you aren't being "big," as you seem to think.

Actually, goaded by a complex of masochist urges, you are prying morbidly, slyly, relentlessly into the details of their relationship, pressing to evoke a shadow play of reminiscent sentiments in him, in order to take the measure of your supposed rival. In a way, you are asking to be stabbed, even while turning a knife in him.

Wife's Shirking Effort to Grow

I'M NOT sure how much credence to give to your theory that your husband can't keep his eyes off attractive women, even though in love with you. As a self-confessed madly jealous wife, you might be imagining things, you know. Of course he may be an ogler. If so, I'd say it's due to his age and special temperament combined.

There are loads of men, old and young, who are calmly oblivious to the past of show of pretty women, after their allegiance is pledged to one. Usually these are mature integrated civilized fellows whose energies are addressed to a rounded repertoire of social interests; who aren't fixated at a juvenile level of engrossment in sex and self.

Now, about you: As the psychiatrist says, only you can cure your jealousy. If you're not making headway, it's because you think the cure is to have gilt-edged assurance that you are loved blindly, exclusively, just as you are by those you love. You are not working, studying, and praying of God to become really mature—a tower of strength in your own right, a doer of good for its own sake; a woman made wise, compassionate and free of pettiness, thanks to a pattern of early experience which challenged her to learn, understand and grow. Your Questions On Homemaking

Will you please give me a recipe for making chicken tetrazzini? O. R. A.

A recipe for making 8 to 10 servings of this delicious macaroni dish follows: Cut the meat from the bones of a boiled chicken and shred it in strips. There should be between two and three cups of meat.

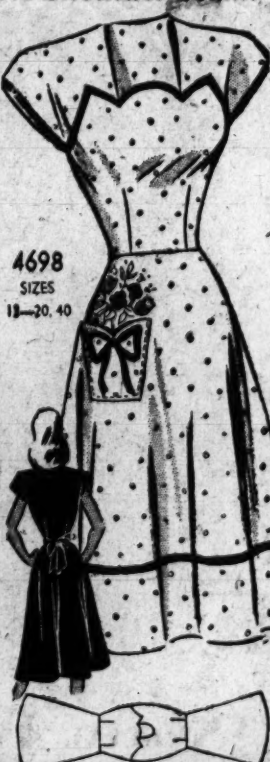

Meanwhile, cook until tender one half pound dry macaroni. Add to this one half pound of sauteed mushrooms. Sauté them by cooking for four or five minutes in a tablespoon of butter in a frying pan.

Make a sauce of three tablespoons butter or chicken fat, two tablespoons flour, two cups chicken broth, and seasonings. Remove from fire and add one cup heavy cream, heated, and two tablespoons sherry wine. Add half this sauce to the chicken and half to the macaroni and mushrooms. Place the macaroni in a greased baking dish. Make a hole in the center. Place the chicken in it. Sprinkle grated Parmesan cheese over top and bake in moderate oven until lightly browned.

If you wish, you may add one half cup blanched and shredded almonds to the chicken before mixing with the other ingredients.

I noticed in your column of July 1 a question as to how to keep a youngster entertained on a trip. Perhaps the method I used when traveling with my two active children might be helpful.

ful. It worked beautifully with them.

The day before we left on our trip, I paid a visit to the dime store and selected inexpensive toys, such as coloring books, little cars, paper dolls with tiny scissors (with blunt edges), blocks, and everything I saw that I thought would be of interest to them. As my children are a boy and girl, my field of toy selection was wide. I also bought paper and wrapping ribbon. Then I went to work and wrapped each thing separately and called them surprises.

After we started our trip and the excitement of going had subsided, we had our first surprise. The children themselves selected the surprise they wanted. When they tired of it, we had another surprise, and so it went until the trip was completed and the surprises finished.

My boy is now in the Marine Corps and my girl in high school, but they still talk about the "surprise trips" we used to have.

The Nancy Carroll of 'Honey' Still the Ingenue at Olney

Well, sir, the girls and boys gath- life had rewarded with lines, ered out at the Olney for the the golden? How had life dealt, opening of "Too Many Husbands," but when the curtain went up on Somerset Ma- comedy they didn't be- lieve it.

Not the com- dy, though they really weren't much trying to be- lieve that sim- ple charade. It's familiar and mildly amusing, but that wasn't what they'd exactly come to see.

Being human, they wanted to see Nancy Carroll, Nancy, dear little Nancy, they used to go to see in so many Paramount pictures in what they now fondly call "the good old days." Nancy of "Honey," Nancy of "The Dance of Life," Nancy of "Hot Saturday" and, yes, even of that perennial Edward Everett Horton will be bringing out to Olney, "Springtime for Henry."

And you know what they were thinking, those good folk whom Nancy Carroll. She looked wonderful, curvy and cute, with peach-cream skin and sparkling blue eyes.

So, you girls who've just turned 40, take heart and get to work on yourselves! If your husband is letting his eyes rove toward some cute chick, let Nancy's bright example give you heart. How she manages to sleep a decade off her corporeal self we know not. But she does it very nicely and it'll give you heart to see her.

The comedy is one of those things about a war widow who re-married her late husband's best friend only to find the first hus- band's late only in the punctual sense. He gets there just the same.

The Olney's company is having some fun with it, the reliable Ruth White doing a good job as the mother; Joseph Hardy getting fun out of the returned hero and, by golly! losing some of his tent av- anoo accent. Martin Waldron is the second, relieved husband.

LESSON IN MANNERS: Alec Guinness as Herbert Pocket and John Mills as Pip, gaining a few pointers on gentlemanly behavior in the film version of Charles Dickens' novel, "Great Expectations," opening today at the Earle and Ambassador Theaters

One on the Aisle—

Beyond Expectations

Dickens Superb As Scriptwriter

By Richard L. Coe

IN "GREAT EXPECTATIONS," the Earle has a richly satisfying movie feast which no one should miss. Set it down as a must and try to see it from the beginning.

There are many fine things about this immensely enjoyable picture, but not the least is the fact that you don't have to be a Charles Dickens fan to enjoy it. Purely as movie-making it's rewarding. Dickensians, to be sure, will eat it up, but even those whose reading is limited to skywriting will find it memorable.

The story is involved, outlandish if you like, and filled with those coincidences which abound in the Dickens novels. Yet, just as the novelist spun you along, so have the makers of this British film captured the uncanny magic of making you rejoice, rather the way a child does after he's snuggled against you and murmured, "Tell me a story."

For that is "Great Expectations"—a story. Its skilled makers simply tell it, making no apologies for events or persons, rolling it along in a matter-of-fact way that makes you care very much about what happens to Pip and his friends.

You first see Pip as a lad on the Kentish marshes, visiting the grave of his parents. From the night, windy and desolate, steps a chained convict, a terrible, forbidding man. He demands food and a file and threatens Pip with dire calamities if he doesn't bring them.

Pip lives with his shrewish elder sister and her gentle blacksmith husband. Pip steals from the house at midnight to bring the food and file, but a few hours later the convict and his partner are caught. To protect Pip the convict says that he stole the food from the blacksmith's house.

Some time later, the neighborhood eccentric, Miss Havisham, sends for Pip to play with her ward, an arch, sophisticated girl, in her weird home. Miss Havisham, deserted on her wedding day years before, still wears her white gown, presides over the cobwebs and dust of the bridal supper, and vows vengeance on all the male sex. But they become unlikely friends.

As a young man, Pip is informed he's been made the benefactor of an anonymous person. He goes off to London to learn gentlemanly ways, thinking through the years that it is Miss Havisham who is helping him.

Make-Believe Magic
But one night—and again it is dark and stormy—a man shows up at his pleasant lodgings and reveals himself as the benefactor. He is none other than Magwitch, the escaped convict. He has become rich in Australia, but if caught in England he'd be hanged. Pip and his London pal, Herbert Pocket, try to help him escape, but fail.

If we told you that Miss Havisham's ward, Estelle, now grown to womanhood, was the daughter of Magwitch, you probably wouldn't believe it nor would you cotton to the notion that Estelle is on the verge of becoming a re- cluse like Miss Havisham.

But such is the magic of this fascinating picture that you are willing to accept it. If you want explanations, you are given none.

The characters, in writing, direc- tion and acting, are your excuse for believing. They're all larger than life, coolly oblivious to everything but themselves, vigorous individu- als. The picture's bland daring in not attempting to make you be- lieve the things that happen to them is the core of its strength.

The Aged Parent

You couldn't ask for better act- ing, though avid Dickensians may rumble that a two-hour running time has had to shear some char- acters and incidents they treasure. Certainly one of the most brilliant bits included is O. B. Clarence as The Aged Parent, deaf and dumb and always referred to as "A. P."

Anthony Wager and Jean Sim- mons are fine as the youngsters who grow into the Pip of John Mills and the Estelle of Valerie Hobson. Finlay Curry is both for- bidding and affectionate as Mag- witch, Martita Hunt superbly eerie as Miss Havisham and Francis L. Sullivan rich as port in the role of the lawyer who weaves the char- acters together.

But our greatest debt is to Da- vid Lean, who directed. Producer Ronald Neame, who collaborated on the screenplay with him, and J. Arthur Rank, Britain's film mo- gul who apparently opened his checkbook and told the boys to go ahead as they saw fit.

Yes, "Great Expectations" is a honey of a picture, a credit to all concerned. By all means see it.

Run-Away Chair Bruises Alexis

Burbank, Calif.—The bad luck which has dogged screen star Alexis Smith for three long months in the form of a broken foot, the theft of her best furs and a nasty fall from a horse, hit a freakish peak the other day when she was knocked down by a run- away wheelchair while enacting a scene for "Whiplash" at Warner Bros.

She suffered minor cuts and bruises, as did Zachary Scott, who was in the chair when it went out of control on an incline and jumped a curb to hit Miss Smith. The picture, a modern romance, stars Dane Clark as a boxer, Scott as his crippled manager and Alexis as the heart's desire of both.

Md. Attracts Many Workers Of Other Areas

Annapolis, Md., July 9 (AP).—That Americans really like to work in Maryland is shown in a report of the Employment Security Department made public today by Governor Lane.

The report, listing figures on persons having "wage credits" with the department, showed there were 843,470 potential claimants for unemployment compensation. This included 609,506 Marylanders.

The people who worked in the State long enough to be eligible to make a first claim for idle pay benefits came from the 48 States in the Union, Alaska, Hawaii and the District of Columbia.

Pennsylvania sent the most—40,800. North Carolina contributed 22,402 workers; Virginia 29,493, and West Virginia 21,238.

Alaska, the coldest contributor, had 31 persons working in the State at some time during the busy pay period. Even Nevada, with its small population, sent 54, and from sunny Hawaii came 98.

Russell S. Davis, head of the department, pointed out that while all these persons were eligible to make a first claim, this did not mean that if they became unemployed they would necessarily draw benefits.

The results of the study according to other States showed these workers in Maryland:

Alabama, 1506; Arizona, 143; Arkansas, 898; California, 2474; Colorado, 240; Connecticut, 1286; Delaware, 1482; District of Columbia, 31,811; Florida, 4007; Georgia, 2591; Idaho, 210.

Illinois, 5337; Indiana, 1685; Iowa, 702; Kansas, 573; Kentucky, 3995; Louisiana, 1286; Maine, 466; Massachusetts, 3079; Michigan, 2078; Minnesota, 2049; Missouri, 1550; Montana, 160; Nebraska, 177; New Hampshire, 107; New Jersey, 1085; New Mexico, 123; New York, 17,327; North Carolina, 22,402; North Dakota, 132; Tennessee, 404; Texas, 1573; Utah, 103; Vermont, 207; Washington, 232; Wisconsin, 619; Wyoming, 110.

Md. Vote Recount Expected to Be Finished July 26

Chairman Jenner (R., Ind.) of a Senate Rules subcommittee investigating the contested Maryland senatorial election said yesterday the committee was attempting to "expedite the counting" of disputed ballots in 17 counties.

D. John Markey, a Republican, is contesting the election last fall of Senator O'Connor, a Democrat and former Maryland Governor. O'Connor won the election by an official State margin of 2232 votes.

Jenner told reporters after a closed meeting of his group yesterday that letters would be sent to attorneys employed in the recount urging completion of the work on disputed ballots.

He added that eight counties remained to be checked and that he expected the recount would be completed about July 26.

Portsmouth, England, July 9 (AP).—Annapolis midshipmen on their regular summer training cruise hit the beach here today following the arrival of a five-star United States naval squadron for a nine-day visit.

Civic authorities appropriated $3000 ($12,000) to entertain the 6000 midshipmen and sailors, and rounds of parties and dances were planned.

Twenty of the midshipmen—not yet named—will travel to London tomorrow to attend a royal garden party at Buckingham Palace.

Ships comprising the squadron included the battleships Wisconsin and New Jersey, the aircraft carrier Randolph, the supply ship Corduba and the Fort Mandan, a floating dock.

Barber Picked Fish Reserves For Title of U.S. Fish Good Neighbor Potomac Life

Waynesboro, Pa., July 9 (AP).—The title of "good neighbor" was given today at Waynesboro's sesquicentennial celebration to W. W. (Dutch) Schaffer, long-time barber and former boxer.

Schaffer, prominent in civic affairs, was awarded the honor for his visit every Sunday over a period of years to the Waynesboro Hospital to greet each patient there. He also makes periodical visits to cheer the sick at other institutions and at their homes.

In week-long "County Day" at the observance of the Federal agency, were present at the invitation of the Bi-State group.

Dr. Walford said a cooperative scientific body maintained by the two States would have to come into being before ways of increasing the number of fish in the Potomac could be arranged. He added that each State should delegate power of regulation to its fisheries commission.

Miss Cable, an expert in the field of fish biology, recommended that fishing be prohibited during fixed periods to permit spawning, and that special areas also be marked off for this purpose.

The Bi-State body also heard Wayne D. Heyendekker of the Atlantic Marine Fisheries Commission, who cited cooperation between New York and New Jersey in a similar problem on the Hudson River.

It was generally agreed that the chief reason for the declining fish population in the Potomac was that too many fish are being taken, and there must be more escape into spawning areas.

Refrigerated Trucks to Serve Valley of Virginia

Baltimore, July 9 (AP).—Regular refrigerated truck service for transport of meat products from Baltimore to Valley of Virginia destinations will be started July 17, the Association of Commerce announced today.

Operated by Smith's Transfer Co. of Staunton, Va., the route will include stops at Winchester, Harrisonburg, Luray, Bridgewater, Elkton, Charlottesville, Lexington, Waynesboro, Clifton Forge, Covington and intermediate places.

The association made a survey which indicated good potential volume for such a service after complaints had been received that local meat packers and distributors were unable to serve the Valley of Virginia customers properly because of a lack of refrigerated trucks going into that area.

Car Overturns, Girl Hurt

Patricia Loftus, 17, Greenbelt, suffered a broken nose and head cuts when a car in which she was riding overturned on Greenbelt rd. near Edmonston rd. early yesterday. She was taken to Leand Memorial Hospital, Riverdale.

The driver, Thomas E. Murray, Stamford, Conn., was uninjured.

Ocean City Fathers Deny Favoritism

Ocean City, Md., July 9 (AP).—This resort's mayor and city council held a special session to go on record with declarations that:

1. Liquor regulations are being enforced without fear or favor.
2. Reopening of a milk bar on the boardwalk is not being blocked.
3. No license has been issued to a "walkabout" and none is contemplated.

The city fathers issued a formal statement on the three subjects after noting there has been a lot of talk about them.

"There has been criticism that some persons are not complying with the law covering the sale of alcoholic beverages," said the statement. "We intend to enforce the regulations to the letter without fear or favor."

Ocean City has a county liquor dispensary for package goods and some 16 or 18 restaurants and hotels pay a $1000 annual city license to sell liquor by the drink.

The numerous night clubs may sell only beer unless they can qualify as restaurants.

There was a milk bar for the youngsters on the boardwalk last year, but it hasn't opened up this season. The formal statement took cognizance of talk that the mayor and council had shown a lack of interest in getting it started again.

"We are heartily in favor," the administration statement said. "As soon as Thomas Price, the proprietor, submits the necessary papers for the zoning board, action will be taken. There will be no tax and it will not be classified as a business."

The mayor and council said they would not tolerate a walking marathon on the boardwalk.

Fairfax County GOP Convenes Saturday

The Fairfax County Republican convention will be held Saturday at 8 p. m. in the Fairfax County Courthouse, Chairman Fred A. Bryan announced yesterday. Republican candidates for all county and State offices will be nominated.

Russian Wheat Crop Thought Bolstering Importance of Country in Foreign Affairs

By Drew Pearson

The weatherman may have some effect upon Secretary of State Marshall's foreign policy. For the past five years bumper American crops have permitted us to dominate the world food situation and thereby somewhat influence its politics. But now, bad weather in Russia may partly reverse this situation.

Although the American wheat crop will be a record-breaker, other American grain crops are down. Unofficial studies of the world wheat situation made by the Agriculture Department indicate that Russia's wheat crop also will be greater than ever.

In fact, Russia, for the first time since the war, should be able not only to end bread rationing at home but export about 300 million bushels of wheat abroad.

The Russians also are expected to bring in a rye crop of some 840 million bushels, which should give them a surplus of about 100 million bushels with which to play power politics.

While this may somewhat affect the Marshall plan for aiding European countries which cooperate with the Western European bloc, actually manufactured goods, particularly steel, still remain almost as important as food.

Martin and FDR

Cagey Speaker Joe Martin used to fight the late President Roosevelt on a lot of things. But chatting with a friend the other day he remarked that it was a lot different visiting the White House when occupied by FDR.

"He was a great guy," reminisced Martin. "He had a way of talking about things that I never forget. He used to say to me, 'Joe, how are those Douglas firs up on the Cape?'"

"I didn't know anything about any Douglas firs on the Cape, and he knew I didn't. It was just his way of putting me in a hole."

Hospital Politics

One member of Congress alone, bull-headed Representative Gene Cox of Georgia, has been able to block the construction of a badly needed veterans hospital.

Veterans' Administrator Gen. Omar Bradley has ordered the hospital built, and a congressional committee originally approved it. But Congressman Cox has said no.

Cox is sore because General Bradley has closed down another hospital in Cox's congressional district at Thomasville, Ga. The Georgia hospital, composed of a group of temporary wooden buildings built by the Army, was ruled out by General Bradley as a firetrap. Also, the plumbing was not sufficient to meet the sanitary requirements of a hospital.

Finally, General Bradley informed Congress that the cost of upkeep on this makeshift Georgia hospital for six years would equal the cost of building a modern hospital 40 miles away in Tallahassee, Fla.

However, plans for the new Florida hospital were scarcely completed when Cox, with the aid of his close crony on the Rules Committee, Congressman Howard Smith of Virginia, slipped an amendment into the independent offices appropriations bill, to stop construction at Tallahassee.

"The District Line" by Bill Gold is being suspended during Bill's vacation.

Congressman Cox has been bombarding the White House and the Veterans' Administration, demanding that the wooden hospital in his district be reopened. Meanwhile maimed and sick veterans in that area are out of luck, all because of the peevishness of one Congressman.

Note—Cox has been drumming up votes for his hospital from Republicans by telling them that the Tallahassee project was a "political gift" President Roosevelt had promised Senator Claude Pepper. Tallahassee is Pepper's home town, but he denies ever talking to FDR about the hospital.

Bathubs for Europe

Despite the critical shortage of cast iron for domestic uses, the Commerce Department last week decided to lift all export controls on the shipments of lavatories and bathtubs abroad.

Story behind this is that plumbing—fixture manufacturer

ers have produced enough lavatories and bathtubs to equip more than a million new housing units in the United States during the current year. They had every reason to expect that these new homes would be built in 1947—but now they won't be.

Air Pilots' Pay

The Government has been ducking one factor which some Civil Aeronautics officials contend to be a root cause of recent air crashes—namely, pilots' pay.

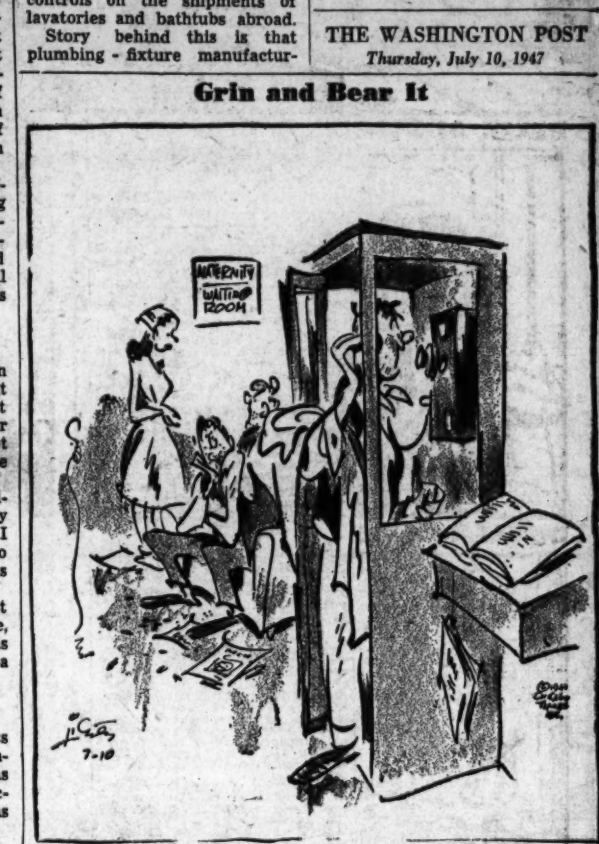

Last year, during the TWA strike, the public got the impression that pilots receive fantastic salaries—between $15,000 and $20,000 a year. However, the only pilots who earn such pay are those who fly the oceans. In the USA pilots earn a base pay of $185 to $300 a month—which they get whether they fly or not. The real money comes from the number of hours they spend in the air. Therefore, if a pilot is to make a high salary he has to spend a maximum number of hours in the air. Sometimes this leads to taking chances.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, figure to figure. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Always Better

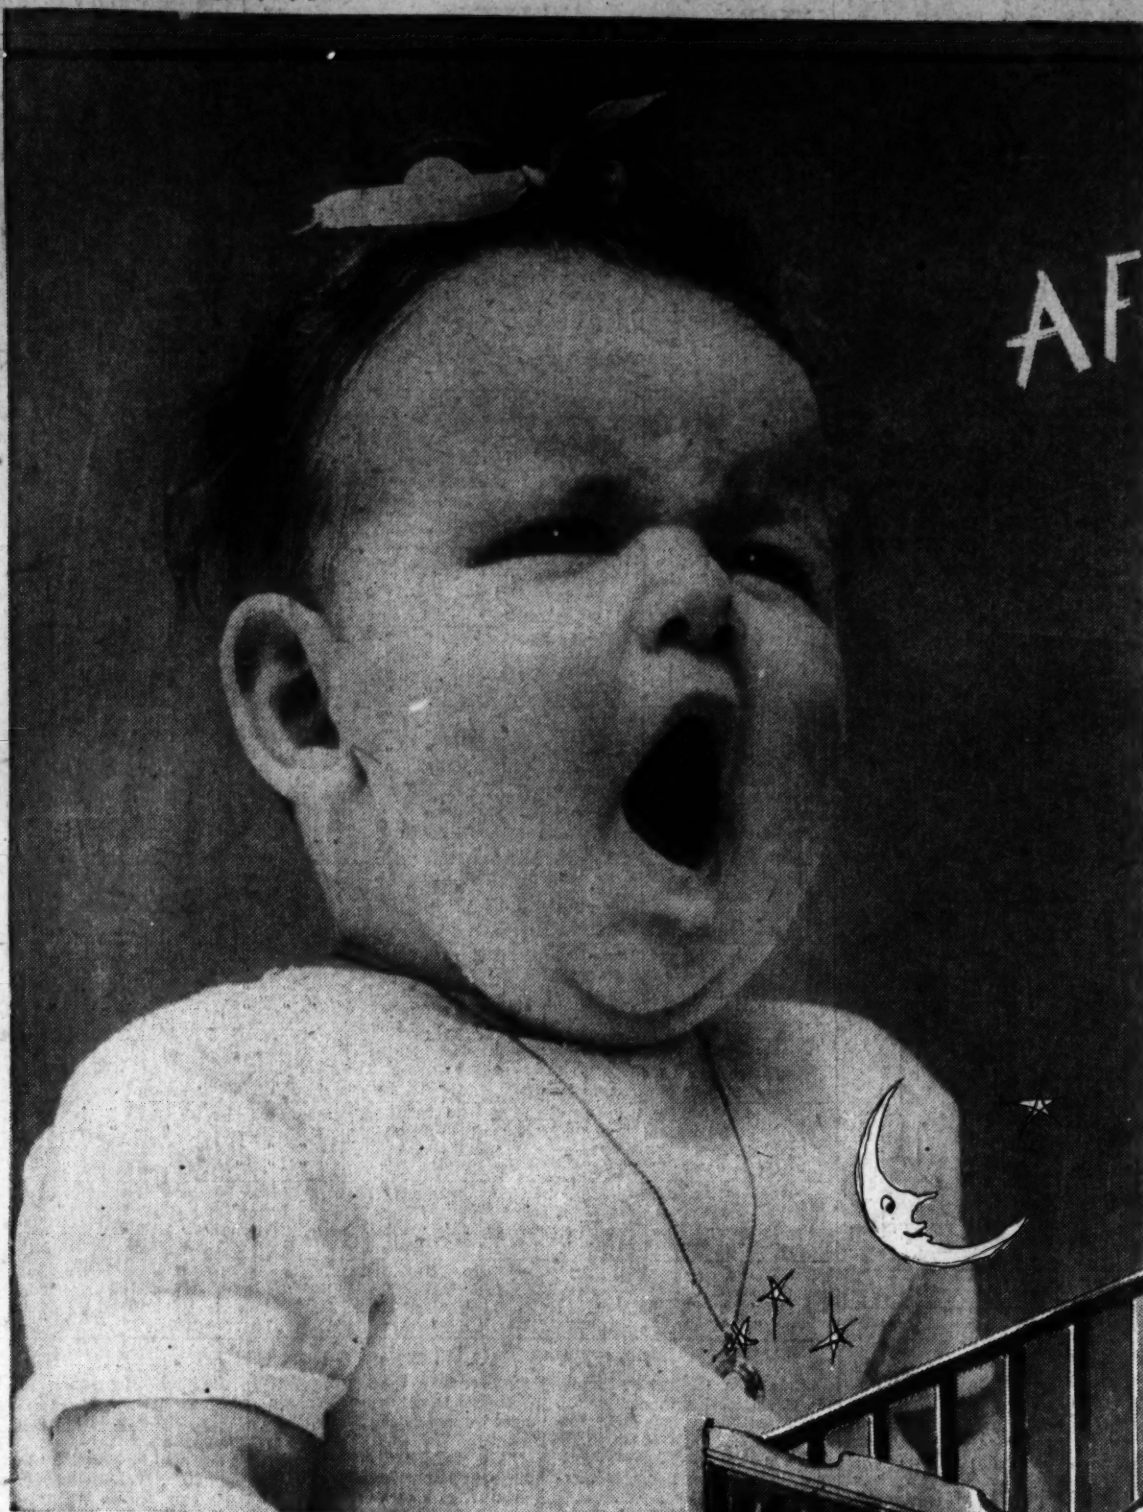

We may perform our daily task . . . As good as anyone . . . And we may do it just as well . . . As we have ever done . . . But that is really not enough . . . Because we ought to try . . . To make the fullest use of all . . . The time that passes by . . . We should endeavor constantly . . . To play a greater role . . . And eventually attain . . . A more important goal . . . There is no way to save the day . . . On which the sun has set . . . And there is no living comfort . . . In having no regrets . . . So let us give the best of us . . . To every job we be in . . . With courage, perseverance and . . . The will to see it through.
